War Department Orders Drastic Changes in Flying Branch.

Present Command Is Seen Displaced

Gen. Westover May Head Subsidiary Branch of Army Corps.

Plans for complete reorganization of the flying units of the Army were announced yesterday by the War Department.

Forty-eight units of the air force, comprising nearly all the military planes in the country, will be taken away from the present Air Corps command, and will be placed under the direct command of the chief of staff.

This will, in effect, strip Brig. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Air Corps, of his power and may result in permanent eclipse of that office by the general staff.

Under the chief of staff will be an air force commander who will be responsible directly to the chief of staff and not to the head of the Air Corps. It was reported last night that this command may go to Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover. The chief of the Air Corps will continue to be charged with training operations and supply matters.

Headquarters for the entire new air set-up will be established at Langley Field, Va.

The reorganization announcement does not include plans for immediate construction of additional planes.

The new air force, comprising at present 48 units with 450 bombing, pursuit and attack planes, will be concentrated in 8 Army air fields from coast to coast. When new planes now under construction or soon to be authorized are completed the unit will comprise about 900 combat planes.

The planes of the new air force will be concentrated at March Field, Hamilton Field and Rockwell Field, Calif.; Langley Field, Fort Crockett, Tex.; Barksdale Field, La.; Selfridge Field, Mich., and Scott Field, Ill.

Reorganization of the air force follows demands of a House committee that Gen. Foulois be removed as head of the Air Corps. The reorganization leaves him nominally with his job but strips him of all his important duties. He remains commander of the Air Corps, but he will have no planes to command.

Plan Long Discussed.

The present reorganization plan, as a matter of fact, was being discussed long before the Foulois incident arose. It is designed to provide the chief of staff with a swift and highly mobile flying force which he can employ as he sees fit in time of emergency.

The organization of the General Headquarters Air Force received its initial test at the recent general staff war games held in New Jersey. During these maneuvers, Gen. Westover was selected to serve as commanding general of the air force at Raritan Arsenal, N. J.

Seven Killed In Plane Blast

Abridge, England, Oct. 2 (U.P.).—Albert Dessano, a Philadelphia manufacturer vacationing in England, was killed today with six other passengers aboard a London-Paris Express plane which exploded in the rain over the English Channel.

The other dead included the pilot and three French and two British passengers, among them two women.

The plane, torn asunder by the explosion, dropped into a choppy sea, where it was found and towed to port by the steamer Biarritz, which was in the vicinity when the accident occurred.

The bodies, five of which were brought ashore by the Biarritz, were so mutilated as to be almost unrecognizable. The accident took place 3 miles off Folkestone.

Dessano, who had been staying with friends at Woodford, Essex, for the past two months, was 56.

San Francisco District Trembles Under Shock

San Francisco, Oct. 2 (AP).—Two distinct earth shocks were felt in San Francisco, Oakland and other bay region cities at 12:21 and 12:31 p. m. today. The tremors caused a temporary flurry of excitement in the American Federation of Labor convention here. No damage was reported.

In San Francisco the shocks were most severe in the western residential sections, which are sensitive to seismic disturbances because of the sandy soil.

Mother Tells Of Girl's Love For Edwards

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 2 (AP).—The love of Freda McKechnie for Robert Allen Edwards, young mine surveyor on trial for her "American Tragedy" murder, was told amid sobs today by her mother, Mrs. George McKechnie.

Calm but intent, Edwards stared at the witness stand as the Commonwealth, hoping to send him to the electric chair, set forth to prove its contention that Edwards, in love with another, slugged his neighborhood sweetheart as they swam the stormy night of July 30 in Harveys Lake—pleasure resort of this mining countryside.

It was only a week before that Freda called at the office of Dr. E. L. Myers. She had been ill.

Tersely, Dr. Myers told of this visit and that the girl was to become a mother.

Even during her illness, Mrs. McKechnie told the jurors, her daughter had been happy.

"Bobby had come back from school," she related. "Freda was happier than ever. She imitated the funny people you hear on the radio. She had dresses made."

These dresses, termed Freda's wedding gowns by the prosecution, were brought into court. Edwards

Insull Dozes As Attorneys Select Jurors

Veniremen's Stock Deals Interest Defense as Trial Opens.

Chicago, Oct. 2 (AP).—While Samuel Insull, sr., drowsed occasionally, chin resting on hand, attorneys fenced today in the first suave battle of Insull's trial for mail fraud—the selection of a jury to wrestle with the $143,000,000 transaction involved.

Questions directed at veniremen, who ranged from public accountants to steam fitters, indicated the defense wanted a jury without unpleasant memories of stocks and bonds, particularly from any of the stocks of Insull's huge public utility system.

Federal prosecutors exhibited willingness to take almost any venireman who presented himself and could hear clearly.

Both sides were limited rigidly in peremptory challenges. The defense can reject only ten of the prospective jurors, the Government only six.

There was a brief reunion among the defendants before they sat down in a row of chairs across the entire side of the courtroom. Insull sat at the head of this special section.

Defense Attorney Floyd E. Thompson, acting as spokesman for the eight defense lawyers, challenged four of the first 13 candidates for prejudice.

Judge James H. Wilkerson, in whose United States District Court the Insull trial opened, asked Veniremen R. T. Bartlett, oil company manager, if he had any fixed opinion, about his guilt or innocence of Insull and his 16 aids.

"There's no doubt of it in my mind," said Bartlett. He explained he had lost money in the crash of Insull's financial companies early in 1932.

Mrs. Insull was in the rear of the courtroom, as was Mary McCormic, opera star and long Insull's friend.

Nonchalant Quintet Loots Bank of $20,000

Wallingford, Conn., Oct. 2 (AP).—Five unmasked, talkative robbers walked into the Wallingford Bank & Trust Co. before noon today and fled with $20,000 in cash and a large number of securities.

Four men gathered up the loot while one warned employes and three customers, including a child, not to be "nervous because only kids shoot and we're not kids."

White House Due to Draft 1936 Budget

Naming of Successor to Douglas Not Expected Till Work Is Done.

Roosevelt Is Worried as Deficit Soars in Face of Revenue Gains.

By Robert C. Albright.

Reports that 1936 budget policies will be shaped personally by the President with the collaboration of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and only routine aid from the Budget Bureau, gained currency yesterday in Treasury circles.

As budget planning entered the period of departmental hearings on next year's outlays, failure to select a successor to Lewis W. Douglas gave rise to reports that a more positive White House direction is planned.

Having weathered the Douglas withdrawal, the Administration is said to feel this is one spot where infernal friction must be wiped from the slate. When and if a director is appointed, he is likely to be one who is ready and willing to go along with the plan wholly drawn at the White House.

Policy Up to President.

Other than filling a job and rewarding political favors, there would be no practical advantage in making the appointment now, when routine budget preparations are well under way. Preliminary demands for 1936 funds by departments and new Federal agencies are being handled now by D. W. Bell, the acting director; the matter of policy is and will be shaped by the President.

This was the view broadly taken yesterday by those who believe the President will bide his time.

On the other hand, much pressure is being exerted in influential quarters for the early appointment of either Representative Charles West, of Ohio, or Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi, both loyal Administration men and unsuccessful Senate contenders.

Even Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, has been mentioned by some said to be interested in sidetracking him from the Speakership race. The House Democratic leader let it be known, however, in no uncertain terms, that he is out for the Speakership and nothing else. Deftly passing this word on to the White House, he indorsed the budget candidacy of Representative West.

Revenues Mounting.

Faced with a $541,671,971 deficit for the first three months of this fiscal year, and a public debt that reached $27,189,648,737 on September 29, the Administration is not taking its budget worries lightly, despite some cheering on the New Deal sidelines over mounting revenues. Between July 1 and September 29 the Treasury took in $953,899,530, compared with $672,001,525 for the same period of last year.

Normally, the guiding hand of the Budget Director, closely coordinating his views with White House and Treasury opinion, makes itself felt during the present period of preliminary departmental budgeting. This year that hand is physically the President's own, and unless he surprises the Treasury itself by appointing a director as independent as Douglas showed himself it will continue to be.

It is "Col." Frances M. ("Robbie") Robinson now.

The young lady who earned $6,000 a year as executive assistant of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, retiring administrator of the NRA, yesterday received her commission to the staff of Gov. Ruby Laffoon of Kentucky and was "too excited to say anything."

"I think I would make a good soldier," she observed. "I've proved that at NRA."

Gale-Tossed, Two Freighters Send S O S Call in Mid-Atlantic

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—Distress and S O S signals were flashed from two British freighters battered by storms in mid-Atlantic waters today and sent nearby ships speeding to their aid.

The S O S came from the freighter Millpool, which reported by wireless to the Mackay Radio Co. that its afterhatch had been stove in, its topmast broken and three men injured.

Distress messages were sent out by the freighter Ainderby, about 1,500 miles northeast of New York. The messages said the No. 1 hatch of the vessel had been stove in. The Millpool is listed as a vessel of 4,218 gross tons, 335 feet long and with a depth of 26 feet. She is under the management of Sir R. Ropner & Co., Ltd.

The Ainderby is listed as the property of the Ropner Shipping Co., Ltd. Both are believed to be under the same management.

Messages from the Millpool were relayed to New York by the American Diamond Steamer Black Gull, and the ship was said to be riding helplessly before a gale. It was not said whether the Black Gull would go to her aid.

Damage done by the gale disabled the Millpool's regular radio apparatus. All messages were sent by an emergency wireless set-up. The Millpool is about 700 miles off the Labrador coast.

Two ships were reported on their way to aid her—the Alaunia and the Canadian Pacific freighter Beaverhill. It was indicated the Beaverhill was 50 miles distant and the Alaunia even closer.

The Black Gull reported by wireless that neither the Alaunia nor the Beaverhill had sighted the Mill-

Gay Detroit Thronged For Series Debut Today

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post).

Detroit, Oct. 2.—Detroit's palpitating public tonight awaited the morrow and the world series.

This great industrial center knew but one topic. Its hotels bulged with pilgrims to baseball's Mecca. The visitors were gay, the citizens serious as they counted the hours before the world series moves in on them again after a 25-year lapse.

And with Detroit the baseball capital of the Nation, the hardest object to locate tonight, paradoxically, was a ball player. Detroit's Tigers and St. Louis' Cardinals, the clubs that will carry the banners of the American and National League onto the series battle ground, were in seclusion, men apart from the pre-series excitement.

Detroit, flushed with the pennant triumph of its Tigers, was alive to the prowess of the National League

Silver Action Argued After China's Query

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As a result of representations by the Chinese government, President Roosevelt and his financial advisers are taking stock of their silver purchase program to determine whether they should continue at the present pace, speed up, or slow down the acquisition of white metal, it was learned yesterday.

In casting up accounts on the silver question, the Administration has learned some of the contentions put forward last winter on Capitol Hill, when the silver plan was being promoted, have proved inaccurate. The first of these was that an increase in silver prices would help China and other silver-using countries, and that the prosperity of such nations would be reflected in increased American foreign trade.

Another contention was that there were 150,000,000 to 200,000,000 ounces of bullion silver in the United States. The silver nationalization order is almost two months old, and to date the Treasury has received only 90,969,584 ounces of the metal. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau believes that "practically all bullion silver has been turned in."

Output Near Low.

Still another contention made last December was that increased silver prices would increase domestic production of the metal, since mines expensive to work could be operated at a profit if the price increased. The President in the same month authorized payment of 64½ cents an ounce for newly-mined silver. Under that order 13,601,000 ounces of silver have been received.

Ambulance Crash Injures Physician

Motorist Arrested Here as Reckless Driver.

The newest of Casualty Hospital's fleet of three ambulances was wrecked and a physician hurt slightly late yesterday, when it collided with an automobile at Third and L streets northwest and overturned.

Dr. Oscar Blicher, a staff physician, suffered shoulder injuries when the vehicle upset. Joseph Callan, driver of the ambulance, escaped injury.

Police were told the ambulance was sounding its siren and speeding in answer to a sick call when the crash occurred. They said the automobile, driven by Wallace Lineberger, 37, colored, of the 100 block of Sixth street northwest, crashed into the side of the ambulance.

Lineberger was taken into custody by police and charged with reckless driving.

Wallace Hits Plea to Bare Data on Sugar

World Interests at Stake, He Testifies in Suit by Hawaiian Firms.

Records on which the Department of Agriculture based its allotment of sugar quotas under the Jones-Costigan act should not be produced in open court because they "would touch on international relationships," Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said yesterday in the District Supreme Court.

The Secretary did not get an opportunity to enlarge upon the statement, although he did say he had Cuba specifically in mind. He indicated a compulsory production of the records would "jeopardize" the public interest.

Secretary Wallace made the statement while he was on the witness stand in the trial of a case brought by Hawaiian sugar interests to have the quota allotted the islands declared "unfair, discriminatory and unconstitutional."

Charge Business Will Drop.

Sugar producers of the islands say their business will be curtailed sharply if they are required to submit to the reduction in imports into the United States which they have been assigned under the sugar act. An unofficial estimate of the amount of money involved by the reduction in exports will reach $500,000.

James R. Garfield and Judge Marion DeVrees, attorneys for the sugar interests, had subpenaed the records upon which the Department of Agriculture based its calculations leading to the allocation of the quotas. Mr. Garfield is a son of President Garfield.

Shortly after he took the stand, Secretary Wallace, whose tenure on the witness stand, long in time but short in actual testimony, was interrupted by an early adjournment, said he had not brought the sub-

Spain Plans to Deport Alleged American Reds

Madrid, Oct. 2 (AP).—Three New Yorkers arrested at Aranjuez on charges of possessing Communist literature were brought to Madrid today, and authorities made plans to get them out of Spain at once.

The three—Adolf Levy, 58; Jules Lawentman, 33, and the latter's wife, who is Levy's daughter—complained that they were roughly treated by police.

Titulescu Turns Down Rumanian Cabinet Post

Police Hunt Hauptmann Ransom Aid

N. J. Declares Evidence Assures Kidnap Conviction.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 2 (AP).—A friend of Bruno Richard Hauptmann today became the quarry of a police manhunt. It was this friend who rushed to the aid of the Lindbergh kidnap suspect when Hauptmann aroused a lumberman's suspicion with a $10 gold note.

Hauptmann has been "positively identified" from a photograph by William J. Reilley, Bronx lumber yard superintendent, as the man who tendered the bank note last February in payment for a 40-cent wood panel, Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, State police head, revealed.

When Reilley began to scan the note carefully, Schwarzkopf reported, the German carpenter's companion hurriedly said, "Never mind," and quickly proferred the exact change. Hauptmann, who said nothing, took back his bank note and the men left in haste, not to return, as promised, for delivery of the wood later in the day, Schwarzkopf related.

Other Developments.

Isidore Fisch, as well as other known associates of Hauptmann, seem to be eliminated as the German's companion of the lumber yard visit, for Schwarzkopf said that Reilley has been unable to identify the second man among the photographs of Hauptmann's known friends and acquaintances.

The linking to Hauptmann of a mysterious companion who apparently knew that the former German machine gunner was allegedly passing "hot" ransom money headed for the day a list of developments which included:

Announcement by Gov. A. Harry Moore that he was satisfied from evidence available that "we can convict" Hauptmann on a charge of murder and that New Jersey's investigations in the case would be completed "in a few days."

Disclosure by authoritative New Jersey sources that notations in a notebook found in Hauptmann's Bronx home were considered as evidence the German carpenter was linked directly with the kidnaping.

Alibi Reported Shattered.

Disclosure of evidence that the Lindbergh kidnapers spirited the baby away over the main road leading to the Sourland Mountain estate, rather than through the woods back of the Lindbergh home there, as first believed.

Bronx District Attorney Samuel B. Foley's statement, after conferring with New Jersey authorities, that he would proceed with plans for placing Hauptmann on trial on an extortion indictment in New York by asking for a special jury panel tomorrow.

A story that two secret witnesses have shattered Hauptmann's alibi that he was not the "John" of the Lindbergh ransom negotiations and payment.

New Jersey investigators, Col. Schwarzkopf revealed, were in a rear room of the office of Cross, Austin & Ireland lumber yard in

Militia Out Again In Georgia Strike

Rome's Foundry Disorders Bring Call to 500.

Atlanta, Oct. 2 (AP).—National Guardsmen, withdrawn last week from textile strike centers in Georgia, were mobilized again today as disorders were reported in a 12-week-old walkout of foundry workers at Rome.

The order was issued by Adj. Gen. Lindley W. Camp for more than 500 officers and men after Sheriff O. L. Betts, of Floyd County, was reported to have asked for reinforcements to quell disturbances among striking molders and mounters.

Gen. Camp clamped down a censorship on news of the movement of the troops.

Doors Barred In Vanderbilt Court Battle

Former Servant's Shocking Story Brings Order to Clear Chamber.

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—Sensational disclosures by a witness concerning Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt and an Englishwoman of title led Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew late today to order private hearings on the fight over the custody of Mrs. Vanderbilt's 10-year-old daughter, Gloria.

Spectators and reporters were barred from the courtroom immediately after Maria Caillot, former personal maid to the mother of the $4,000,000 heiress, testified to the alleged association of Mrs. Vanderbilt and Lady Milford-Haven in a hotel at Cannes, France.

"In view of the nature of this testimony," Justice Carew asserted, "the future sessions in this case will be taken in private."

Mrs. Vanderbilt, seated at the counsel table with her sister, Consuelo, wife of Benjamin Thaw, jr., buried her face in her handkerchief as the maid testified.

Her attorney, Nathan Burkan, demanded to know whether Miss Caillot had told anyone else of the alleged incident.

She replied she had told Herbert C. Smyth, counsel for Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, paternal aunt of

Trio Killed When Bomber Crashes Into Mountain in California.

Bishop, Calif., Oct. 2 (AP).—Three Army fliers were killed when an Army bombing plane crashed and caught fire today in the rugged mountain country 5 miles north of the mammoth ranger station in the Inyo National forest. A fourth member of the crew bailed out.

Army officials at March field, near Riverside, would not reveal the names of the dead fliers pending further word of the crash. Neither was the name of the man who escaped learned.

"A wing of the ship crumpled and it fell between 2,500 and 3,000 feet, crashing into a mountain," said Douglas Robinson, district forest supervisor.

"The squadron flew over this district about noon. When I learned of the accident I immediately organized a searching party of about 30 men. We first found the man who had jumped from the falling ship. He received only a sprained ankle.

"He helped direct us to the plane wreckage, which was about a mile from the dirt road. The plane's gasoline tank had exploded and the bodies of the three men were slightly burned. They had been killed in the crash, hwoever, for the plane was a wreck of metal.

"Lieut. Jack Mills, who was in a plane following and saw the crash, landed at Bishop and joined us in the search."

State Hospital Brutality Is Probed in Missouri

Jefferson City, Oct. 2 (AP).—W. Ed Jameson, president of the State Eleemosynary Board, went to Nevada, Mo., tonight to investigate assertions that inmates of State Hospital No. 3 had been so brutally treated that five deaths have resulted in the last several years.

The statements were made by G. F. Payne, of Thayer, a former inmate of the hospital, who later was employed at the institution.

Truce Appeal To Be Aired In Green Call On Roosevelt

NRA Board's Head Opposed as Enemy

Vertical Union Issue Appears; Sympathy Given Austrians.

San Francisco, Oct. 2 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced late today that after the organization's convention ends here he will leave for Washington to confer with President Roosevelt on the latter's suggestion for a "trial period of industrial peace."

Green asked manufacturers to make known their attitude toward decisions of Federal mediation bodies in labor disputes.

"They have already told their membership not to obey the Federal Board's decision in labor disputes," he charged. "Labor has always pursued the policy of arbitration of its disputes and we will gladly cooperate with the President for settlement of these disputes.

"The manufacturers' associations have taken the attitude that these decisions of Federal mediation boards should not be obeyed and respected. They must change their hostile attitude.

Says Labor Cooperates.

"The attitude of labor always has been that of pursuing a policy of cooperation in every way possible with the President and the Administration."

Resolutions designed to forward the social and economic program of the A. F. of L. were presented today.

One resolution suggested President Roosevelt be asked to have an "impartial investigation" made of the alleged hostile attitude of S. Clay Williams, chairman of the new NRA board, toward recovery codes.

The outlawing of company unions was demanded in another resolution. Legislation was asked prohibiting employers from interfering with efforts of workers to organize. Relief and age benefit suggestions were numerous.

The resolution for the investigation of Williams' attitude alleged continuance of Williams in office would result in the "virtual enslavement of the workers of our country."

Williams Accused.

It also charged the tobacco industry paid large dividends and bonuses to officials during the depression, and that Williams, head of a large tobacco company, had opposed proposed codes and stated 40 cents an hour was an excessive minimum wage for skilled workers.

While the resolutions were being prepared for presentation, Green denounced European dictatorships and the alleged prosecution of the masses in Austria. He spoke on the floor of the convention in response to a plea by Max Winter, a former resident of Austria, for the sympathy of organized labor toward the strife-torn country.

Federation officers indicated they considered the challenge of the National Association of Manufacturers a closed incident.

Dictators Denounced.

In his address against dictatorship, Green said:

"The time will come when those who are assuming to be dictators and tyrants of Europe will pay and answer to the masses of the people.

"The American Federation of Labor is deeply touched with the persecution of the working people of Austria.

"They are going through a terrible experience. The persecution of the Nazis and Fascists have been inflicted on the masses of working people in Austria, who have committed no crime other than to attempt to unite for their economic and political betterment.

"They have been murdered, persecuted, their rights denied and their privileges taken from them. Now they are persecuted victims of the most vicious dictatorship."

Green said he had been told there was "no spot on the face of the earth where poverty is so great as

Atmosphere Balks Death Rays Aimed at Earth by Huge Stars

Death rays which would end all animal and plant life are being projected toward the earth by huge stars in the universe, but a protective layer of the earth's atmosphere prevents the death-dealing beams from harming anything.

This disclosure was made yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution, whose scientists have been studying the death stars from the Mount Wilson Observatory in California.

Practically all the blue-colored stars in the universe are continually sending out vast showers of these death beams, and giving out few of the beneficial type of ultra-violet rays which help man and plants.

These "stars of death" are three times as hot as the sun. The major part of the rays which are irradiated by them, the institution said, would kill organisms instead of supporting life.

"The greater part of the radiation," said Dr. Charles G. Abbott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, "would not produce the sensation of light in an organism upon which it fell. Just what sensation it would produce is hard to say."

With newly devised instruments, Dr. Abbott and his assistant, L. B. Aldrich, have succeeded in making the most delicate measurements of the energy of stars ever accomplished.

After traveling over trillions and quadrillions of miles of empty space, taking sometimes five years to reach the earth, the rays were figuratively captured and had their temperatures taken by two scientists.

Then, with delicate instruments, the astro-physicists split up the radiation of the celestial bodies into their component parts and determined the radiation output of each star in seven regions of the spectrum.

Old Guard Put To Severe Test By Insurgents

Regulars' Strength May Be Equaled After Next Election.

(Associated Press.)

Old Guard Republicans in the Senate face their most severe test in years as to whether they can maintain their numerical strength in that chamber.

If Democratic predictions of November election results prove sound, insurgent Republicans for the first time will have almost as much personnel power in the Senate as the regulars.

Sixteen Senate seats now held by Republicans are to be filled next month. Eleven incumbent candidates come under the head of G. O. P. Old Guarders. It is among these that Democrats claim they will make substantial gains to offset whatever increases Republicans might make in the House.

At present the Republicans control 35 Senate seats. They already have reelected Senator Frederick Hale of Maine, an Old Guarder, but he is facing an election contest started by the Democratic candidate, F. H. Dubord.

Of the 35, there are 21 generally classified as regulars. Should the Democrats capture 6 to 10 seats, as they predict, the Old Guard would be sharply reduced. On the other hand, all but one of the Republican independents have Democratic opponents and there may be casualties among them, also.

Republican irregulars seeking reelection in November are Senators Hiram Johnson of California, Cutting of New Mexico, Frazier of North Dakota, and La Follette of Wisconsin, who is running on the new Progressive ticket, and Joseph I. France of Maryland, who is campaigning on a Republican platform pledging cooperation with the Roosevelt Administration.

Democrats expect to win Senate seats from regular Republicans in West Virginia, Missouri, Ohio, Maryland, Indiana, New Jersey, Connecticut, and probably Rhode Island and Pennsylvania, besides retaining 17 seats they now hold.

Republicans, however, expect to offset Democratic gains by capturing three Senate seats now held by Democrats in Wyoming and Montana.

Millions Released By Baltimore Bank

Baltimore, Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Thousands of Baltimoreans were pleasantly surprised today when the Union Trust Co. announced it will pay over $10,000,000 in certificates of deposit on October 11.

The money has been "frozen" in the bank since the banking holiday of 1933. Depositors have been holding certificates of deposit, representing the amount they had in the bank. Reorganization of the company and the appointment of Thomas B. McAdams, of Richmond, as its president, has resulted in such a substantial strengthening of the bank's position that in August it was announced the company would pay one-half of the amount of the certificates of deposit on October 11.

But today the directors decided to pay the full amount of the certificates.

2 Michigan Democrats Confer With Roosevelt

Arthur J. Lacy, Democratic candidate for Governor of Michigan, who has been regarded as particularly close to the White House, yesterday conferred briefly with President Roosevelt. He was accompanied by Frank A. Picard, Michigan's Democratic nominee for Senator, and Mrs. Picard.

Both candidates expressed belief that chances are bright for the election of Democrats this year, despite Michigan's long record of electing Republicans. They insisted that their call at the White House was principally social.

Havana, Oct. 2 (AP).—Santiago Claret, newspaper publisher, was shot and slightly wounded today by a man who fired four bullets as Claret returned to his office after lunch. Police said they knew the assailant.

France and Italy Cuddle Closer as Bogey Man Hitler's "Boos" Grow Louder.

By Raymond Clapper

DESPITE official denials as to details, it is an open secret in diplomatic quarters that the French and Mussolini have quit making faces at each other and are working out a mutual understanding which will make them allies in effect.

The reason is Hitler. Playing a lone hand, he is doing more to change the diplomatic face of the world than all of the ponderous international conferences held since Versailles.

France and Italy, long rivals in the Mediterranean, are burying their differences in face of a common potential enemy. They have known for a long time what the Senate munitions investigation disclosed—that Germany is rearming. This same fear of Hitler was behind the invitation the powers extended to Russia to join the League of Nations. They count on Russia to help tighten the ring around Germany.

Russia likewise felt the need of friends against possible future trouble from her Nazi neighbor and also from Japan. Therefore she agreed with alacrity to join hands with the capitalist nations which a few years ago she was energetically denouncing.

All of which, coupled with the refusal of the United States to go into an even barter arrangement with Germany, is forcing Hitler to withdraw into his shell and head toward a self-contained economy.

In allied quarters the view is that Hitler will last just as long as the Reichswehr wants him to.

The new Brazilian ambassador, Oswaldo Aranha, and his retinue, had just alighted under the White House portico and were clustered around the doorway preparatory to entering to present their credentials to President Roosevelt. At that moment Mrs. Anna Dall skipped up the steps, her blonde hair blowing in the wind. She came to a sudden stop, blocked by the group of diplomatic visitors, and seemed about to turn away and go around to the back door when a courteous newspaper reporter, who was addressed as "Barge," stepped forward to offer assistance.

"I got influence here," he said as he led the young lady through the crowd and into the White House door.

The charge that Republicans in Maine invoked the State pauper law and refused to permit persons on Federal relief to vote in a number of instances is made by F. Harold Dubord, Democratic senatorial candidate, in contesting the recent reelection of Senator Frederick Hale, whose alleged plurality was 1,701 votes. Democrats claim to have obtained an unofficial ruling from Chief Justice William R. Pattangall, of the Maine Supreme Court, that the State law disqualifying paupers does not apply to those on relief rolls.

Private studies indicate that the CCC camps are the most expensive form of unemployment relief and the straight dole the cheapest. PWA falls somewhere in between. These estimates are based on monetary cost alone without allowing for social benefits involved. Secretary of Interior Ickes says PWA has justified its cost. Undoubtedly he would be even more pleased had he not been compelled, because of political pressure, to spend money on certain debatable projects. But he probably will get additional appropriations because PWA tastes like pork to most Congressmen. Money is being spent in almost every county in the United States.

If Albert Edward Wiggam has counted noses correctly, 30,000,000,000 persons have been born in the world since the era of recorded history. And if each one had been charged a head tax of $1 it would be just barely enough to pay off the public debt of the United States, which last Saturday afternoon was $27,189,648,737.58. It's a little more by now.

Madame Minister Owen, 49, Celebrates at the White House

"Madame Minister" Ruth Bryan Owen celebrated her forty-ninth birthday yesterday with a dinner date at the White House, according to the Associated Press.

In between that and a luncheon in her honor at the Women's National Press Club she had conferences at the State Department. There employes who remembered her father as Scretary of State were among the first to congratulate her a year and a half ago when she was made the first United States woman diplomat, Minister to Denmark.

Thta appointment was climax to a career which had been colorful from the days when she was known the Nation over as daughter of the "Great Commoner," William Jennings Bryan, on the opposite side of the political fence from "Princess Alice" Roosevelt, a year older than she.

Contemporaneous with the two of them was a then less limelighted young woman, Eleanor Roosevelt, now wife of the President, and Minister Owen's hostess last night. She'll be having a birthday this month too, her fiftieth, on October 11th.

Mrs. Owen yesterday made her first personal report to Washington since she entered an untried field. Interviewed, she said she had found Denmark willing to accept a woman emissary, on exactly the same basis as a man.

Cottonhead Bank: No, That Must Be Two Other Bills

A new name was given yesterday to the cotton control measure that has caused so much furore in the South that even its authors are seeking its abandonment.

Representative William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, who, with his senator-brother authored the cotton control bill that bears their name, was a White House visitor yesterday. He was explaining to newspapermen that two-thirds of the voters in a referendum in the South next month must approve the act for it to remain in effect next year. Then one of his rivals for the speakership, John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, appeared.

"That means it is not going to be continued, doesn't it William?" he chided his colleague. The latter admitted that the measure had aroused "a lot of opposition."

Then a newspaperman, his tongue twisted, asked the Mississippian what he thought of the "Cottonhead bank bill."

"Well, I've heard it called the Bunkhead bill and the Bonehead bill," he replied, with a laugh, "but that's the first time I've ever heard it called that."

Indian Tribe Sues U. S. For Millions in Land

Milwaukee, Oct. 2 (AP).—The United States today was defendant in a suit involving several million dollars in land and tax money brought in Federal court by a group of Oneida Indians.

The Indians ask that the Government be forced to restore to them the ownership of the Oneida Reservation of 75,540 acres and that it reimburse them for about $1,000,000 in taxes they have paid. The case is based on the ground the Dawes act of 1887, by which the land was allotted to the Indians individually, was unconstitutional.

Roosevelt Due To Shape 1936 Budget Himself

Not Expected to Appoint Successor to Douglas Till Work Is Done.

Appropriations Committee, which initiates all budget legislation in Congress.

Whether or not a new link is forged equally as binding, Chairman James P. Buchanan plans to get his House appropriations hearings under way early in December, for presentation to Congress early the following month.

Election reverses and interim changes will force a partial reorganization of the House appropriating group. Representative Glover H. Cary, of Kentucky, is slated to succeed Representative W. A. Ayres, of Kansas, as chairman of the Navy appropriations sub-committee. Ayres has been appointed to the Federal Trade Commission.

Representative Tilman B. Parks, of Arkansas, or Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, will succeed Representative Collins as chairman of the War Department appropriations sub-committee.

British Admiral, Roosevelt Recall World War Days

World War days were recalled to President Roosevelt yesterday in the visit of Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, who commanded the British Channel squadron at the time a young Assistant Secretary of the United States Navy, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, paid a visit in those waters.

Assistant Secretary Roosevelt went aboard the admiral's flagship, which paid him the honor of running up his flag while he was aboard. Remembering this visit, the President, learning the admiral was in Washington, invited him to the White House.

The admiral, accompanied by Mrs. Keyes and Bernard M. Baruch, the financier, who is a mutual friend, arrived at tea time. Their call closely followed ceremonies in which the President received the new Brazilian Ambassador, Oswaldo Aranha, and the Egyptian Minister, Ibrahim Rateb Bey.

Former Grid Star Retired by Army

Murrel, Cleared of Texas Charge, 'Incapacitated.'

Retirement of Second Lieut. John H. Murrel, once one of Army's brightest football stars, was announced yesterday by the War Department, according to the Associated Press.

The department said Murrell had been retired as of September 30 because an Army retiring board had found him "incapacitated for active service."

Murrel, until his retirement, was stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. He was acquitted there of criminal charges brought against him by a Texas woman.

Roosevelt Sees Labor Truce As Answer to Relief Problem

Thinks It Would Results Is Greatly Reduced Works Outlay.

By Elliott Thurston.

President Roosevelt looks upon his proposal for an industrial truce, over which capital and labor at the moment are squabbling, as one means of meeting the gigantic relief problem which is seriously worrying the Administration.

Continuity of employment, and the improvement in general business, that would result from a definite period of peace would do much, in the White House view, to diminish the need for relief funds, for huge additional public works appropriations and other outlays now swelling the budget and thus accentuating business fears of inflation.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes, as PWA administrator, gave the first definite inkling yesterday that he contemplates a "real appropriation" this winter to continue public works. He would not discuss the amount but hinted that it would be well in excess of a billion dollars.

Fight for 30-Hour Week.

While one group is contemplating vast new outlays in public works for relief of unemployment and to stimulate industry, the American Federation of Labor is renewing agitation for the 30-hour week as a method of further spreading employment and absorbing the unemployed. The Administration frowned on this plan last winter when the House Labor Committee unanimously reported out a 30-hour week bill. Administration leaders kept it from coming to a vote.

The Administration view is still that the 30-hour week should not be imposed by law. Nevertheless the question remains of how best to meet the relief situation this winter. And the industrial armistice idea grew out of this concern as well as out of the desire to allay growing fears that the strike epidemic might become general.

Although Mr. Roosevelt, in his Sunday night radio speech, continued to champion public works and said he would stand or fall on his refusal to "accept as a necessary condition of our future a permanent army of unemployed," his close associates insist that this does not mean disregard for the budget.

President Is Worried.

On the contrary, there are numerous indications that Mr. Roosevelt is much worried, not so much about the ability of the country to stand the taxation required to support a National debt well in excess of present or contemplated levels as by the adverse business psychology now existing because of uncertainty over the budget.

A few, at least, of his close advisers explain his failure to mention the budget in his radio speech on the ground that he could not add anything new to his original promises to balance it until the relief situation is clearer and policy for meeting that situation this winter is more developed.

It now appears that Mr. Roosevelt is more keenly aware than ever before that revival of private business depends upon removal of adverse psychology compounded of a series of uncertainties, of which, he felt, the strike epidemic was one of the most acute. If that could be removed for a definite period, then the next question to be met would be the further cost of relief—and that in turn is what is giving rise to the uneasiness over the budget and inflation.

As yet the Administration has set no figure for public works. Ickes, Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins and other officials have discussed the subject with the President, but without being able to reach a decision on the amount to be asked of Congress.

Ickes intimated yesterday, however, that he has in view a program that dwarfs previous ones. He said $200,000,000 would be necessary to go on with present projects, while some $400,000,000 a year could be spent on conservation, retirement of sub-marginal lands and water power development which Mr. Roosevelt previously has advocated. Although theoretically in a revolving fund, the $3,700,000 PWA funds already voted are either spent or pledged.

From a strictly political standpoint, the Administration can not profess to have produced much recovery when relief expenditures are bigger than ever. In fact, every sort of compulsion is upon the President now to do what is necessary to reassure and revive private business and thus ease the load off the Treasury.

Truce Part of Problem.

The new set-up in NRA, with Hopkins incidentally on the policy board, has integrated the relief problem more closely with general Administration policy-making. The projected labor truce is looked upon as part of that problem.

A White House secretary explained yesterday that Mr. Roosevelt does not intend to summon a conference between capital and labor or to arrange a series of conferences, but expects instead to talk with individual leaders on both sides with a view to arriving at the same goal of a period of peace.

The fact that industry appears to expect a proclaimed truce that would, in effect, freeze existing relationships with labor, while labor rebels at foregoing organizing activity or adjustment of pending controversial questions presented a disconcerting picture of fresh discord. Mr. Roosevelt, it was explained, did not mean that collective bargaining was to be dropped for a time, or that labor's "rights" under the NRA were to be waived.

Garrison Resigns.

It is evident that a good deal remains to be done yet in clarifying the terms upon which the Administration thinks a truce should rest—though, it was said, Mr. Roosevelt already has discussed the proposal with a few leaders on both sides. Joseph R. Grace was among callers yesterday though whether he discussed the plan, as an employer, with the President was not divulged.

Lloyd G. Garrison, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, resigned yesterday, effective next Tuesday, in order to go back to his place as dean of the law school at the University of Wisconsin. He had wished to return earlier, but was persuaded to remain until October 1.

There is a possibility that Chief Justice Walter P. Stacy, of the North Carolina Supreme Court, long prominent as an arbitrator in labor disputes, in whom both labor and capital have confidence, may succeed to the post on this important part of the arbitral machinery to which Mr. Roosevelt said he hoped labor and capital would consent to leave their differences during the proposed truce.

Mitchell Asks Aerial Defense Against Japan

A. E. F. Air Chief Calls Nation Most Dangerous Enemy of U. S.

(Associated Press.)

A former assistant chief of the Army Air Corps, outspoken, colorful Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, informed President Roosevelt's aviation policy planners yesterday that "our most dangerous enemy is Japan and our planes should be designed to attack Japan."

The head of the A. E. F. air forces and a leader for a unified air service told the aviation policy commission how he thought the United States should prepare for its aerial defense:

Merge Army, Navy and all air services under one command; build planes with a cruising radius of 6,000 to 8,000 miles; make detailed plans for war, including the evacuation of New York City in case of an air attack by Japan "from a base in Alaska;" construct dirigibles, for 50 of them "competently" handled could destroy Japan within two days.

Mitchell resigned from the Army in 1925 after a court-martial trial for "insubordination," largely because of his open criticism of things as they existed. Yesterday he was just as critical as of old.

These are some of his points:

Plans for a new bomber to carry an 8,000-pound load and for a new pursuit plane capable of 300 miles an hour were scrapped when they would have put the United States far ahead of other nations.

The loss of the airship Akron off the New Jersey coast was "disgraceful"—the result of poor staff work and bad navigation.

The special board headed by former Secretary Newton D. Baker of the War Department, which recommended against unification of air services, did nothing "except to ball up the thing worse," and officers who signed the board's report "ought to be kicked out of the service."

Aircraft Carriers Criticized.

In case of war "we'll have to go to Europe to buy engines."

The only result of a big Army airplane purchase program under the present set-up would be profits for "air merchants" and the manufacture of "a whole bunch of airplanes that will all wear out at one time."

Numerous accidents to American airships "have been due either to the gross stupidity of people who send the ships out or the inability of crews to handle the ships."

The Army's air-mail carrying was "a disgraceful performance * * * the worst show I've ever seen anywhere. It's a wonder they weren't all killed."

Members of the commission, chosen by President Roosevelt to recommend a permanent aviation policy for submission to Congress, said they considered Mitchell's testimony "very interesting."

G.O.P. Labor Unit In Virginia Votes Boycott on NRA

Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—An action unique in this section and possibly the first of its kind in the United States was taken today by the Waynesboro Industrial Employes Republican Club when the group voted to boycott as far as possible all business houses displaying the Blue Eagle or charging code prices.

The club also adopted a resolution expressing deep disapproval of both the NRA and AAA.

The Republican club was organized here recently at a banquet with H. B. McCormac, Winchester, Virginia chairman of the Republican party, as principal speaker, and its officials have been active in organizing employes of local industries into political units.

Caffery's Assailants Clash With Troops

Havana, Oct. 2 (AP).—United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery revealed tonight that a soldier guard had exchanged shots with unknown persons who participated in the third attack upon his home early Monday morning. Caffery said he did not attach much importance to the incident.

"The attackers shot four or five times from an automobile parked near my home," he said, "and a soldier standing at the gate fired his rifle four times. Then the attackers drove away."

Tannenberg, Oct. 2 (AP).—That the memory of President von Hindenburg still is dear to the hearts of Germans was evidenced today in pilgrimages of thousands of admirers to his sarcophagus on the eighty-seventh anniversary of his birth.

Two months after the president's death, flower-laden crowds waited patiently for admittance to the marshal's tomb in the Tannenberg Memorial.

Mitchell and Ace Discuss Air Defense

(Associated Press.)

Two Californians came out of the West yesterday to tell the communications commission that radio was responsible for the San Jose lynching last November and that a "censorship" makes it impossible for the public to "have as much confidence in radio programs as they have in newspapers."

The commission heard the first statement from Father Cornelius Deeney, professor of political science at Santa Clara College. S. Howard Evans, representing the Ventura Free Press, made the latter assertion.

The lynching to which Father Deeney referred was that of Thomas H. Thurmond and John M. Holmes, confessed kidnaper-slayers of Brooke Hart, a 22-year-old former Santa Clara student.

The Jesuit educator said few persons "thought of taking the law into their own hands" after capture of the two men until a Los Angeles station 400 miles away announced a mob was marching toward the San Jose jail.

"That was the first inkling most people of that district had of the proposed lynching," he continued. "When they heard the announcement, hundreds dashed from their homes to join the mob."

As a result, he added, police were helpless and the mob succeeded.

Evans, after saying that the present system of licensing "makes broadcasting unsound and unfair," added:

"The pretense of a free commercial competition on the air has misled many listeners into believing that they can have as much confidence in radio programs as they have, for instance, in newspapers.

Aid Pledged to Sinclair, McAdoo Flies to Capital

Los Angeles, Oct. 2 (AP).—Announcing he told Upton Sinclair, Democratic candidate for Governor, he may return in time for the gubernatorial campaign "if it should become desirable," United States Senator William Gibbs McAdoo said tonight he would leave in his private plane for Washington tomorrow.

Senator McAdoo, a member of the Democratic Senatorial campaign committee, said it was necessary for him to go East "to take care of official business and make plans for campaign activities."

Arrest Bares Threat Against Curley Child

Boston, Oct. 2 (U.P.).—A $5,000 extortion threat against 10-year-old Francis Curley, youngest child of former Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, Democratic nominee for Governor, was revealed tonight with the arrest of Philip Herlihy, 35, at a Back Bay address.

A threatening note was sent to the Curley home in Jamaica Plain two days ago, it was alleged. Detectives immediately sought Herlihy, who had been committed to a psychopathic hospital following a similar threat against a member of the Curley family about two years ago.

Weirton's Vote Declared Cast After Threats

Coercion Used in Firm's Union Plan, Charge by Government.

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 2 (AP).—Charges that the Weirton Steel Co. effected its employe representation plan by coercive methods were heard in Federal District Court today. The Government opened its case to enjoin the company from interfering with the election of representatives by employes in collective bargaining.

Matt Suntala, of Weirton, W. Va., testified his superiors at a Weirton coke plant told him "to vote or lose my job."

A primary and a general election were held at the Weirton plants last year, when employe representatives were elected to deal with the company under the so-called company union plan.

"Before both elections they posted two names on the board and told us these are the men we are to vote for," Suntala testified.

Didn't Lose Job.

Under cross-examination, Suntala said he did not lose his job, and that he believed the reduction of 4 cents an hour he suffered when work was resumed after the 1933 strike was due to slack conditions.

The case is expected to test the strength of the "New Deal's" guarantees to labor under the NIRA.

Government attorneys won their first legal duel with the opposition. Over the protest of defense counsel, Judge John P. Nields ordered voluminous records turned over to the Government for inspection.

Suntala, who said he is a member of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, testified his "first knowledge" of the employe representation plan, or "company union," was four days before the election when literature was distributed among the employes.

Questioned on Plan.

"Did any one explain that plan before the election?" asked Paul Williams, Government attorney.

"No, they didn't."

"Did you attend any meeting of the employes at which an officer of the company spoke?"

Suntala recalled attending one at which he said J. C. Williams, president of the Weirton Steel Co., spoke.

"What did he say?"

"That he'd never recognize the Amalgamated, that he'd close up first."

In cross-examination Earl F. Reed, of Pittsburgh, chief of Weirton counsel, asked Suntala if he had not seen the booklets containing the constitution and by-laws of the employe representation plan before the election. The witness replied he had not.

Railroads Urge Right to Raise Freight Rates

(Associated Press.)

The Interstate Commerce Commission was told yesterday that more revenue must be obtained by railroads to continue giving the public the "best service it has ever had."

Appearing in behalf of the majority of the country's railroads, which are seeking general freight-rate increases to raise an additional $170,000,000 annually, L. W. Baldwin, president and a trustee of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, asserted that carriers operating 62 per cent of the 135,000 miles of road in the West had operating deficits in 1933.

Cites Operating Losses.

T. J. Dunnion, treasurer of American Air Lines, Inc., expressed the opinion the Government should make up in mail subsidies the difference between income and operating losses. He said his company would incur a loss of approximately $2,500,000 in the year ending next May, despite an increase in passenger traffic.

Testimony by Roy S. Kern, chairman of the coal and coke committee for railroads in the Pittsburgh district, disclosed that four lines did not sign the petition for higher freight rates on coal. These carriers are the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad, the Pittsburgh & West Virginia, the Montour and the Peoria & Pekin Union Railway.

In response to a question, Kern said that if the increase were granted by the commission some coal rates would be higher than ever before.

"Relief Contribution."

A plea for passage of regulatory laws for all forms of transportation was contained in a statement by Charles E. Denney, president of the Erie Railroad, which was read before the commission. Denney was ill and unable to appear.

L. E. Wettling, of Chicago, manager of the Statistical Bureau of the Western railroads, told the commission Western carriers operating in drought areas had contributed "to the relief of agriculture" during 1933 and 1934 more than $4,100,000 in reduced rates on live stock and feed. From January 1 to August 1 this year, he said, 15 railroads in drought areas lost $3,593,000 in that way.

Baldwin testified that "the deficit on roads having no net income increased in round numbers from $7,000,000 in 1929 to over $93,000,000 in 1933."

Angry Yaqui Tom-Toms Throb In Protest of Statue Burning

Likeness of St. Francis Is Destroyed in Mexico as Fete Nears.

Nogales, Ariz., Oct. 2 (AP).—Tom-toms of the fighting Yaqui tribesmen were booming in the Sonora hills tonight, signifying the displeasure of the Indians over the burning of a statue of St. Francis Xavier, patron saint of Sonora, and other recent antireligious developments.

Government officials, who described the burning of the statue as the death knell of superstition in the State, were on the alert for possible trouble. The Federal garrison at Magdalena was reinforced.

For decades the statue, standing at Hermosillo, the State capital, was the object of peon adoration and regular pilgrimages by Catholic Indians.

Catholics protested the burning of the statue as an act of desecration of church property and usurpation of religious rights.

Yaqui tribesmen, whose fighting reputation is part of Mexican history, recently asked that the cathedral at Magdalena be turned over to them for religious purposes next Thursday, which is San Francisco's day. It was learned Gov. Rodolfo Elias Calles has refused the request.

This cathedral, formerly the Mecca of the tribe, has been converted into a political party hall, library and dormitory.

Despite the closing of the cathedral to worshipers, the annual pilgrimage to Magdalena has begun. The Papago Indians from Arizona have begun crossing the border for the fiesta. Yaquis have been converging on the town.

Navy to Check On Merchant Ship Hazards

Naval Officers Will Make Inspection to Prevent New 'Morro' Tragedy.

American merchant marine ships will be inspected by Naval officers to avert disasters similar to the burning of the steamship Morro Castle.

Steps to check on the emergency equipment of the vessels were taken yesterday by Secretary Roper when he arranged to obtain the services of the Naval officers necessary and informed shipping lines of his plans.

"I have asked," Roper explained, "that the assigned Naval officers conduct a thorough-going inspection of personnel and material on board the various ships, including fire drills, lifeboat drills and use of life preservers, with special reference to ability of crews in handling lifeboats, examination of fire-detecting and alarm systems, examination of fire doors and water-tight doors in water-tighe bulkheads and, along with other pertinent inspection features, a consideration of fire risks due to unclean or careless conditions.

"Consideration will also be given to the discipline of the crew, knowledge of duties, watches maintained and the general disciplinary standards of the ships."

Roper declared the inspection work would constitute an important phase of the Administration's efforts to learn "what additional safeguards in regulation or in new legislation are necessary to protect the lives of our people on the sea."

In a letter to ship operators, Roper commented:

"If, as a result of these special inspections, conditions are discovered that require correction, you will be as eager as I am to see that this is done and if, upon the other hand, everything is found to be ship-shape you can be sure that I shall be the first to give commendation where it is deserved."

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Navigation, reported the Navy would cooperate. The exact number of officers to be required for the task was undecided.

Kresge Heiress Divorces Baron For 'Vulgarity'

Detroit, Oct. 2 (AP).—The Baroness Wijk, the former Catherine Kresge, daughter of the 5-and-10-cent store multimillionaire, was granted a divorce here today from Baron Carl Carlson Wijk, whom she married in England July 8, 1931.

She testified that the baron "habitually indulged in gross and objectionable vulgarity." After their marriage in England they lived for a time in France and then came here. They were separated January 15, 1934.

When her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian S. Kresge, were separated by divorce, Miss Kresge was given $5,000,000 by her father.

The court held that the Government had failed to offer sufficient proof to warrant the case going to the petit jury.

Mother of Girl Weeps as She Faces Edwards

Mrs. McKechnie Tells of Daughter's Romance Before Tragedy.

Freda's pathos and heartaches when the young surveyor's love apparently had cooled were told by the mother.

The romance, she said, "sort of dwindled" when Bobby went away to college.

In low, halting tones, Mrs. McKechnie—wife of a coal mine "boss"—said that on one week-end, when Edwards was home from school he told her that Freda knew he did not love her and that he wanted to marry Margaret Crain, a music teacher.

But the defendant's attention to her daughter was renewed when he came from college in June. While he had called before only on occasional week-ends, he went to the McKechnie home frequently after his return.

Then she told of her daughter's visit to the doctor, corroborated by the physician.

It rained and the lightning was fierce the night of July 30. Freda and Bobby went out together. Freda did not return.

"Late that night," Mrs. McKechnie testified, "I called Bobby. He said that he let her out of his car on Main street. I said 'something terrible has happened to Freda.' He replied, 'Oh, no, nothing has happened.'"

The mother wept almost continuously after her testimony, sitting across the courtroom from the accused slayer, as other witnesses were called to tell of that stormy night.

The scene shifted to Harvey's Lake.

Freda called that night at the home of Mrs. Robert Patton, sr., on the lake.

Mrs. Patton, mother-in-law of Freda's sister, Elizabeth, testified Freda "seemed happy;" that she talked with her for a few minutes and "then went down the road to an automobile."

Defense Attorney McGuigan asked:

"Didn't Freda tell you who was in that car, who was driving it?"

"Boy Friend" at Resort.

"No," Mrs. Patton said. "I simply asked 'is your boy friend with you' and Freda said 'Yes.'"

Further than Mrs. McKechnie's statement that Freda left home with Edwards, none of the witnesses could testify that the young man seen with her at the lake was the surveyor.

The Rev. G. E. Ruff, Lutheran pastor at the lake resort, said he looked out his window that night and saw two people wade into the water.

The trial's first day of evidence drew a throng of men and women elbowing their way to the 200 seats in the courtroom. The crowd was orderly, tensely following the testimony.

The prosecution hoped to end its case by tomorrow night.

Services Are Held For Crash Victim

Luray, Va., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today in Evergreen Cemetery, Luray, for Leroy Foltz, 23, killed in an automobile accident in Gloucester County Sunday morning.

Foltz, accompanied by his brother, Floyd Foltz, a city carrier in the Luray postal service, went to Gloucester Saturday night for fishing in the Rappahannock River. While rounding a sharp curve in one of the sandy roads of Gloucester County the car skidded, plowing into one of the iron danger signals on the road.

State's Attorney Appeals Pay Rate

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 2 (AP).—Judge J. L. Almond, jr., of hustings court, took under advisement an appeal of Commonwealth's Attorney R. S. Smith from an order of the late State compensation board fixing salaries and expenses in Smith's office for the last half of the current year. He said he would render his decision as soon as possible.

The prosecutor's appeal to the court asked that his salary be fixed at the rate of $6,000 a year, that of his assistant at $4,000 a year, and that of his stenographer at $1,500, with $300 additional for expenses each year. The board had fixed his compensaton at the rate of $5,000 a year, that of the assistant at $2,000 a year and that of the stenographer at $1,000 a year.

The Roanoke City Council, through City Attorney Robert C. Jackson, opposed the appeal, as did the State compensation board, which was represented by D. Gardiner Tyler, assistant attorney general. The salaries fixed by the compensation board for the prosecutor and his stenographer were those advocated by city council, but in the case of the assistant the council asked that this office be discontinued.

Voteless D. C. Cited in Appeal From Tax Term

Bowles, Disbarred Lawyer, Holds Income Levy Here Illegal.

Baltimore, Oct. 2 (AP).—Norman S. Bowles, disbarred Washington lawyer who recently was sentenced to three years for violation of the income tax laws, has based part of an appeal on the claim that collection of income taxes from residents of the District of Columbia, who have no vote is illegal in that it is "taxation without representation."

Bowles' contention was raised in the brief he prepared for argument of his appeal before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Richmond on October 25. A copy was sent to Cornelius Mundy, special assistant to the Attorney General, who is preparing the Government's brief. He was Assistant United States Attorney here when Bowles was tried and sentenced by Judge W. Calvin Chesnut.

Mundy's answer points out the principle of taxing only those who had a voice in fixing the tax rate was contained in the Declaration of Independence, not in the Constitution. He quoted Chief Justice John Marshall to the effect that "representation is not the foundation of taxation."

The national government wanted the city's budget reduced according to the new economy policy. The ministry's action ended the controversy.

Hauptmann's Aid in Ransom Deals Tracked

Jersey Declares Evidence Assures Conviction in Kidnaping.

the Bronx, "about February 14" last, when Hauptmann and his associate appeared in the front office to arrange with Reilley for the purchase of the wood panel.

Investigators Present.

The investigators were State Police Detective Lewis Bornman and Arthur Koehler, wood experts, who "happened" to visit the yard that day in their efforts to trace the wood used in the ladder down which the kidnapers took the baby from his crib. The wood was subsequently traced to another Bronx lumber yard, the National Millwork & Lumber Co., where Hauptmann, doing odd jobs about the yard, could have had access to it.

It was the tracing of wood found in Hauptmann's garage to the yard where Reilley is employed that led to the uncovering of the new evidence, Schwarzkopf said.

After Hauptmann had been arrested, the wood was traced and Reilley was questioned. The information he gave enabled the investigators to establish that Bornman and Koehler had been so near to the man they were hunting.

Companion Described.

"An abrupt-mannered, cleanshaven, dark-complexioned man, who spoke very good English," was the way Reilley described Hauptmann's companion. He said the man was about 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighed about 150 pounds. After looking at a picture of one of Hauptmann's friends, Reilley said that man resembled the mysterious companion in some ways, but he was not sure enough to make a positive identification.

Col. Schwarzkopf disclosed that the cashier at the lumber yard, Miss Anne Murphy, had verified Reilley's story of how Hauptmann presented the $10 gold note. Miss Murphy, however, did not get a look at Hauptmann's friend.

A strong indication that the kidnapers had carried the baby away over the main road leading to the Lindbergh estate developed when Schwarzkopf announced that a wire thumb guard which the baby wore when he was taken from his crib had been found on the new road about 200 yards from the gatehouse at the entrance to the estate.

Found by Betty Gow.

The thumb guard was found by Betty Gow, the Scotch nurse of the slain baby, and Elsie Wheatley, domestic employed on the estate.

Further to support the theory that this road was used, the State police head disclosed that footprints, found in the mud and believed to have been those of the kidnaper or kidnapers, "pointed away from the house, practically parallel to the driveway and toward the main road."

Some time after Schwarzkopf made these revelations District Attorney Foley arrived here for an extended conference with Gov. Moore, Attorney General David T. Wilentz, and Schwarzkopf.

Confident of Connection.

It was after this meeting that Moore said New Jersey expected to complete its investigations of Hauptmann within "a few days" and added he was satisfied "we can convict him" when he is extradited to face trial on an indictment charging him with the Lindbergh child's murder.

The Governor gave no hint as to when the State will institute extradition proceedings to bring Hauptmann to Flemington, the rural county seat of Hunterdon County, to stand trial. He said the proceedings probably would not be started this week, but reiterated it was New Jersey's intention to try Hauptmann before he answers the extortion indictment against him in New York.

Former Vanderbilt Servant Shocks Court With Her Story

Gloria, who is fighting Mrs. Vanderbilt's efforts to obtain possession of Gloria and contends her sister-in-law is an unsuitable custodian.

"So you told Mr. Smyth about it and he forgot to ask you when he was questioning you before?"

"Oh, no; I didn't," Smyth declared jumping up. "But I didn't think it proper to bring out any matter of that sort."

Justice Carew questioned the former maid for 20 minutes after clearing the courtroom and then adjourned the hearing until tomorrow.

As Burkan left the courthouse he said he "would have to get Lady Milford-Haven over here" to refute the testimony and added he would ask Justice Carew tomorrow to open the hearing to reporters.

In his chambers the justice declared he would consider the situation overnight and enter a ruling tomorrow as to whether newspaper representatives would be admitted to further sessions.

He added that he would also consider giving Lady Milford-Haven the right to take the stand in regard to the maid's testimony.

Miss Caillot had been on the stand virtually the entire day, and declared her former mistress frequently was intoxicated, drank liquor before breakfast, gave cocktail parties daily and entertained at all-night revels.

She related a vivid story of her five years in Mrs. Vanderbilt's menage, an era of gay life in the American colony in Paris.

"Every story they've told about me is a pack of lies," Mrs. Vanderbilt, widow of the late Reginald C. Vanderbilt, said in an interview during a recess. "There is not a word or a syllable of truth in anything they have said about me.

"I'll have plenty to say when I get my day in court."

Mrs. Thaw Scoffs.

Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, Mrs. Vanderbilt's sister. Consuelo, termed the testimony "pointed piffle maliciously arrived at—stories so ludicrous that they were more ludicrous than lewd."

Miss Caillot, her eyes flashing at counsel and the court, was asked in detail about her mistress' personal habits.

"Did you ever see Mrs. Vanderbilt drunk?" she was asked.

"Yes, sir, sometimes," Miss Caillot replied in precise, French-accented words.

"Often?"

"I don't remember."

"More than once?"

"Oh, yes."

"Many times?"

"Many times."

"Many, many times?"

"Not many, many times, but many times drunk."

"Was she under the influence of liquor as often as once a week?"

Nathan Burkan, counsel for Mrs. Vanderbilt, objected, saying:

"You'll have my witness saying my client was drunk every day if you keep on like that."

Miss Caillot testified her mistress regularly stayed in bed until noon and as late a 2 or 3 in the afternoon except when "she slept all day;" that their Paris home was the scene of cocktail parties almost every afternoon, and that two or three times a week her night entertainments lasted until 5 in the morning.

Maid's Statement.

The maid also declared that Mrs. Vanderbilt paid no attention to her daughter or her health.

"Did you ever see Mrs. Vanderbilt go out walking with the child?" Smyth asked.

"No."

"Did you ever see her reading to the child?"

"No."

"Did you ever see her teaching her games?"

"No."

Efforts by Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew to have the witness testify as to whether Mrs. Vanderbilt ever suffered from a "hangover" were blocked because Miss Caillot could not understand the word.

"You'd better put that in French, your honor," Smyth suggested.

"I can't do it. Can you, Mr. Smyth?" the justice rejoined.

Blaring bands played in relays at Mrs. Vanderbilt's all-night parties, the maid declared, frequently awakening the entire household, including Gloria, who was in ill health.

On cross-examination the maid admitted she had been discharged by Mrs. Vanderbilt but did not know the reasons. She declared she had intended to leave before she was fired.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Thaw, wore a black ensemble and a silver fox cape. Mrs. Thaw wore a deep-red tailored suit.

When she left the courtroom at recess Mrs. Vanderbilt hid her face in the collar of the cape and rushed through the corridors. She showed intense interest in the evidence and once leaped from her chair when the former maid testified to her frequent intoxication. She immediately sat down, however.

Broker in Land Charged With Practicing Law

Supreme Court Petitioned to Issue an Injunction Against W. M. Berry.

Richard A. Harman, an attorney, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to issue an injunction to prevent J. McKinney Berry, 1363 Wisconsin avenue northwest, real estate dealer, from practicing law.

In his petition, which was accompanied by a motion for an injunction pending final settlement of the issue, Mr. Harman charged "the defendant is engaged in the conduct of a real estate business in the District of Columbia, and has not the right to practice or to engage in the practice of law, or to maintain a legal department or to hire or employ attorneys at law to carry on the practice of law for the benefit of others."

Allegations of the petition recited that Berry "advertises in effect that he maintains a legal department for the use of others; that he handles all necessary legal procedure in connection with proceedings in landlord and tenant cases in the District of Columbia for the benefit of owners of real estate who entrust the rental and collection of rent to him; that he files suits for the possession of rented or leased real estate; that he handles all legal matters in connection with real estate rentals, evictions, &c."

Berry was also charged with preparing pleadings, giving legal advice, and appearing in court for the benefit of his clients.

The petition follows closely the action of the Municipal Court judges in issuing a rule allowing only members of the legal profession to practice law in their courts. Because of the informality of the Municipal Court lay-persons have, in the past, been permitted virtually to practice law without the sanction of the District Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals.

5-Man Board Gets NRA Reins From Johnson

Richberg, Aids Confer With Retiring Head; Williams Assumes Duties.

A five-man administrative board and its two advisers assumed command of NRA yesterday.

The men who took over the duties of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, departing administrator, conferred behind closed doors with the general and Donald R. Richberg, director of the industrial emergency committee, which will aid the President in drafting future NRA policies.

Later Johnson posed for photographers with the new board chairman, Clay Williams, North Carolina tobacco manufacturer, and Richberg.

Williams said he expected his new post would require all of his time "for the next few weeks at least."

After the board departed Johnson and Richberg chatted together. Both reiterated to reporters that they had not quarreled over the NRA reorganization.

Johnson spent the rest of the day shaking hands with several hundred NRA employes who called to bid him farewell. He autographed photographs and copies of his speeches for many of the visitors.

Williams reported the board was so busy "trying to become familiar with details of the job" that no important decisions had been reached. He made known the appointment of Lieut. Kilbourne Johnston, son of the retiring administrator, as acting divisional administrator in charge of manufacturing codes.

Young Johnston, who failed to follow the lead of his father in dropping the "t" from his name, has been at NRA for several months on a leave of absence from the Army.

The officers also will be the guests of the Naval Academy at the Navy-Virginia football game Saturday in Griffith Stadium.

Piccard to Build Biggest Balloon For Record Flight

Paris, Oct. 2 (AP).—A balloon higher than the Cathedral of Notre Dame and with a capacity of 113,000 cubic meters (147,000 cubic yards) when fully inflated will be used by Prof. Auguste Piccard in his next stratosphere flight, he says in a copyright article in Le Journal.

Prof. Piccard estimated the balloon would reach a record-breaking height of 19 miles. It will weigh more than a ton and will have an aluminum gondola, shaped like a diving bell.

The Belgian scientist and his aid will carry parachutes and the gondola will be fitted with two manholes, enabling them to leap if necessary.

Col. Mercy, 85, Civil War Hero, Succumbs Here

Was With 127th Illinois Volunteers; Funeral Set Tomorrow.

Col. Robinson Barr Mercy, 85, who left his home in Illinois at the age of 13 to become one of the heroes in the War Between the States, died yesterday at his residence, 3822 Legation street northwest, after a brief illness.

One of the few survivors of the famous fighting 127th Illinois Volunteers, Col. Mercy enlisted in 1861 as a drummer boy.

He served throughout the war, and won the Congressional Medal of Honor for "conspicuous gallantry on the battle field." Once, at the height of a bombardment, his horse was shot from under him, but he escaped unhurt. He was breveted a lieutenant before the close of the conflict.

Returning to civil life, Col. Mercy engaged in business at his home, in Oswego, Ill. Later he represented a well-known wholesale concern in various parts of the country. He came to Washington 15 years ago, and retired 5 years later. Col. Mercy's wife died only last May.

'Anybody's Fight' as Democrats Scramble for Speaker's Gavel

(Associated Press.)

The battle over who will wield the powerful speaker's gavel in the next House has thrown the Democrats into factional scrapping over the field of ambitious candidates.

Claims and counter claims as to the ascendency of this and that candidate are being bounced about on Capitol Hill as the individual campaigns progress.

Prospective Democratic members of the next House are being canvassed by the candidates personally and by mail for pledges of support. Whisperings of trades and rumors about whether the White House will or will not take a hand in the naming of the successor to the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey are being circulated.

It is all a part of the various tactics used by the politicians and their personal followers in striving to sew up a majority of the Democrats before they meet in caucus three months hence to secretly select their boss for the next two years.

At present the field includes Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, party floor leader in the last House; William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, chairman of the Rules Committee; Sam Rayburn, of Texas, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee; John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, chairman of the Veterans Committee; James M. Mead, of New York, chairman of the Postoffice Committee, and Robert A. Green, of Florida, chairman of territories.

Other likely candidates include Representatives Adolph Sabath, of Illinois; Clarence Lea, of California; John McCormack, of Massachusetts, and Marvin Jones, of Texas.

The race was enlivened yesterday when Bankhead and Rankin met at the White House. They shook hands and agreed the contest was very much "undecided" despite claims of Byrns that he has enough pledges to capture the post.

Bankhead was coming from a conference with President Roosevelt when he met Rankin going in.

"I think it still is status quo, John," Bankhead replied.

When Bankhead was asked whether he talked with the President about the Speakership, the Alabaman became indignant. He said:

"The President, of course, would not lend his support one way or the other in this contest. No one should expect it and no one has the right to claim such support."

There has been talk that Rayburn is favored by some individuals close to the White House.

Bankhead predicted many others would be in the race before the party caucus, and added that if he was "elected Speaker it will be because of my service and not because I have harassed somebody to help me."

Filipinos to Delay Increase in Tariff

Prospects of Rift With Japan Behind Action.

Manila, Oct. 2 (AP).—a proposed increase in Philippine tariffs to protect Philippine free trade with the United States will be deferred at least until next year, it was learned today.

The Japanese foreign office spokesman had said the increased rates might "affect adversely the friendly relations between Japan and the United States." The Japanese government had instructed its representatives to inform authorities at Washington and Manila that trade between Japan and the Philippines, recently rapidly increasing, "may be virtually killed."

Official circles disclosed it had been decided to offer a measure aimed at protecting only a few Philippine industries, not affecting materially Japanese trade with the islands. The Japanese trade has been gaining rapidly, chiefly at the expense of the United States.

France to Store Metals Needed in War Times

Paris, Oct. 2 (AP).—France decided today to store metals needed in time of war.

The government's fear of the scarcity of materials to equip the army led President Lebrun to decree a prohibitive export tax on waste copper, aluminum, zinc, nickel and tin. The action follows similar measures taken by Germany, officials said.

A study looking to a reduction in bus fares between Washington and the Virginia Highlands and Aurora Hills sections of Arlington County is being made by the Arlington County Public Utilities Commission, according to Chairman Calvin I. Kephart.

Albert M. Jones, secretary of the commission, points out that the A., B. & W. Transportation Co. charges a straight fare of 15 cents between Washington and Alexandria, but also has a special rate of 20 cents a round trip when tokens are purchased.

While the straight fare between Washington and the Virginia Highlands and Aurora Hills sections is 5 cents lower than the Alexandria straight fare there are no tokens sold for these destinations.

The commission takes the view that there should be tokens sold to residents of the two Arlington County communities on the basis of seven round trips for a dollar. Jones has been instructed to make a survey to determine the number of Arlington County residents who use the bus daily and to report to the commission at its November meeting.

Sunrise in the Suburbs

By Clyde H. DuBose.

The Prince Georges County Bar Association is planning to erect a memorial to William Wirt, early United States Attorney General and noted writer.

The memorial, it is expected, will be erected on the site of his birthplace in Bladensburg, adjacent to the George Washington House.

This particular spot has been under water several times lately. If Eastern Branch is at its abnormal height on the day set for the dedication of the memorial, the scene may be something like this:

A great host of persons approaching in rowboats, silently propelling their gondolas down Defense highway and the Baltimore boulevard. (No motor boats are allowed—it would break the tranquillity of the Venetian street scene.)

Early arrivals are busy chucking their oars in the underwater mud and tying their craft to them. All have on life preservers. The master of ceremonies arises from his throne in the bow of a gayly decorated creek-going scow and announces the audience will be led in the good old song "Asleep in the Deep."

The orator of the day, attired in a bathing suit (he didn't have cab fare) is properly introduced. After recounting the Morro Castle disaster, which is supposed to lend color to the situation, he tells of the historic deeds of William Wirt.

In closing, he adds that, considering Wirt was not a seaman, he doesn't see how he could have been born on this spot, anyhow.

Alexandria, becoming sensitive to her lack of educational facilities, has asked for and (strange as it seems) received, a PWA appropriation of $60,000 for a new high school.

Now let anyone say the city won't have a building more modern than the nineteenth century.

Speaking of Alexandria, statistics show there were 21 fewer drunks within the town limits last month. The supply of liquor must be giving out.

Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas of Arlington County has refused an invitation to address the country's civic federation on the subject of the duties and compensation of his office.

He gave "pressing engagements" as his reason for refusal. However, he wrote them a letter explaining why he should get more money and more help if he is to continue in office.

Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, of College Park, who is in charge of the county participants in the Maryland Tercentenary pageant, to be held in Baltimore Friday and Saturday, has announced plans are in readiness.

It is no easy task to coordinate a great multitude of persons and cause them to perform the functions of actors and actresses without a hitch or a slip somewhere. Mrs. Allen and her helpers are to be commended.

Virginia U. Extension Division To Resume Community Classes

Increase Over Last Year's Enrollment of 1,300 Is Expected.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 2 (Spl.). Beginning this month the University of Virginia extension division will resume its State-wide program of organizing college classes in the various communities which enables men and women to complete regular courses of study at home.

Under the supervision of Prof. George B. Zehmer, director of the extension division, and Prof. John A. Rorer, head of extension teaching, student groups are being formed, and a system for supplying visiting professors is taking shape. Professors are sent to any section where 15 or more register for the courses of instruction.

While most of the students have come from the teaching profession in the past, there is a growing demand for the service from recent high school graduates who are unable to attend colleges. An increase over last year's 1,300 enrollment is expected.

For purposes of geographical convenience, the extension faculty is composed of professors from colleges and universities in the State more readily accessible to the class groups. In addition to the University of Virginia, institutions cooperating in the program by furnishing instructors include the State teachers colleges at Farmville, Fredericksburg, Harrisonburg and Radford, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, William and Mary College, Emory and Henry College, Hampden-Sydney College, Lynchburg College, Randolph-Macon College, Roanoke College, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Sweetbriar College, and Washington and Lee University.

The extension department maintains permanent offices and local directors in Richmond, Dr. H. H. Hibbs, director; Petersburg, Miss Lula O. Andrews, director; Roanoke, Miss Mary B. Duncan, director, and Danville, Curtis V. Bishop, director. A director for an office in Lynchburg is to be appointed.

Vienna Council Votes to Keep Same Tax Rate

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The town council of Vienna, Va., has voted to continue the present corporation tax rate through the next fiscal year, $1.60 on the $100 property valuation. This will raise approximately $5,500. The 5 per cent delinquent tax penalty will be imposed as of January 1 each year, instead of March 1, as has been the practice in the past.

The town has encountered difficulty in collecting taxes from its citizens and has had to curtail its activities until the town clerk can make further collections. About one-half of last year's taxes are still unpaid. The clerk was instructed Monday night to make all possible collections within 60 days. Those failing to pay within that time will have their property attached.

Faced with a curtailment of funds the council is endeavoring to economize and it was suggested to it that one possible savings could be effected by the elimination of all street lights in the town. The clerk was instructed to investigate provisions of the contract between the town and the electric company to see if this can be done.

Rehabilitation Project.

The proposed District of Columbia rehabilitation project of establishing farms for needy now on poor relief, with Federal funds, within Fairfax County, Va., will be opposed by members of the Providence Grange, of Oakton, Va.

The question was discussed at the regular meeting of the Grange Monday night, but the filing of a formal protest against the project was postponed until the committee appointed by the County Pomona Grange last week makes its report.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Fox, of Oakton, were elected delegates to the convention of the State Grange, in Richmond, on October 24 and 25.

Democratic Registration in Montgomery County. Reported High.

Another high registration for the Democratic party in Montgomery County was indicated last night by unofficial returns from 15 of the 32 registration precincts. The total of new registrants in the precincts reporting were: Democrats, 292; Republicans, 118.

Although a light registration was evident throughout the county, the Democrats had a majority in all but 3 of 15 precincts reporting. The heavier Democratic majorities were registered in the Fifth Bethesda precinct, where the count was 13 to 1, and the First Bethesda precinct, where the count stood 22 Democrats to 2 Republicans.

The Republicans showed gains in the Sixth Takoma Park and the Laytonsville Districts, where the poll was 13 to 11 and 19 to 15, respectively. A feature of the Rockville returns was the transfer of 15 colored Republicans to the Democratic rolls.

that he is being considered seriously for the permanent appointment.

The present reorganization has been opposed by many Air Corps officers who wish to keep the organization as a separate unit. Under the present arrangement the actual flying strength of the Army is given the same status as other branches of the service—infantry, artillery and cavalry.

Announcement of appointment of a commanding officer for the new air organization is expected to be made within a few days by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff. Announcement of the reorganization was made by Secretary Dern, who had previously indicated he did not intend to remove Gen. Foulois from his position as head of the Air Corps.

China's Queries Stir Discussion Of Silver Fate

Contentions Leading to Program Adoption Erred in Part.

000,000 ounces of newly-mined silver received in nine months, it is doubted whether American production this year will reach the figure of two years ago.

It is possible some of the mines are holding the metal back in the hope a change of policy may result in increased prices. It is also true that many mines which would be worked if silver reached a price, of say $1 or more an ounce, are unprofitable ventures at 64½ cents. But an increased silver production in large part depends on a revival of a demand for copper and that depens on a revival of the capital goods industry.

These facts, on the one hand, indicate the Treasury is committed as a result of the newly-mined and nationalization orders to purchase less silver than originally contemplated. But under the policy set forth in the silver purchase act this failure of the domestic supply to come up to expectations has caused complications.

One to Three Ratio.

The silver purchase act committed this Government to a policy of maintaining its metallic monetary reserve in one part silver to each three parts of gold. Using the statutory price of silver as a basis, achievement of this goal would require the Treasury to obtain 1,300,000,000 ounces of silver, it was estimated.

Thus the less silver the Treasury can obtain at home, the more it must acquire in foreign markets and the more silver it purchases in foreign markets the greater becomes the pressure on China, which already has alarmed that country's government.

Another aspect of the matter is that the more silver purchased abroad, unless American foreign trade unexpectedly picks up, the more gold this country must export, thus reducing its stocks of the yellow metal.

This is the situation the Treasury experts found, based on the premise that the Roosevelt Administration will continue its acquisition of silver in reasonable amounts from time to time until the 25-75 per cent ratio is approximated. The world-wide consequences of such a course now are being deliberated as a result of the Chinese note.

Causes Chinese Deflation.

The representations of the Chinese government have not been made public. It is understood, however, that the Nanking government asked what course the United States contemplated as well as this Government's reaction to a suggestion that it sell silver to this country for gold.

In China silver is the basis of the monetary system, more so than gold was in this country prior to the New Deal. Thus increases in the price of silver have had the effect of reducing domestic prices in China, and this country's silver policy, while inflationary here, has a deflationary effect in China.

Fear that, to protect itself, the Chinese government will put an embargo on silver has increased the flight of the metal from that country to the London market, further complicating the Chinese situation, according to dispatches. Thus the Chinese are considering adoption of a bimetallic standard, using American gold for that purpose.

The radio bearing placed the Millpool, the Black Gull's message said, at about "70 degrees on the port bow of the Alaunia."

The Ainderby has a net tonnage of 4,860, is 390 feet in length with a 55-foot beam and 26.5-foot depth. She was constructed in 1925 and was bound from Swansea, Wales, to Montreal.

Wireless reports to Mackay Radio said the British steamship Trematon was standing by and that the Cunard Liner Antonia was speeding to the scene.

59 in Crews of 2 Ships Distressed in Atlantic

London, Oct. 2 (AP).—The British freighter Ainderby, reported in distress in the North Atlantic, left Swansea a week ago with a cargo of coal for Montreal.

She carries a crew of 33.

The steamer Millpool, also reported in distress, left Danzig a fortnight ago laden with grain for Montreal. She was due to arrive Friday. The Millpool carries a crew of 26.

Coast Guard Speeds To Leaking Motorship

Seattle, Oct. 2 (AP).—The new Coast Guard patrol boat Atalanta ploughed heavy seas tonight as she raced to aid the motorship Alitak, of California, which was 700 miles northwest of Cape Flattery, leaking, but with her pumps doing effective service.

The cutter Shoshone, at 12:14 p. m., had reported the Alitak headed for Cape Flattery in fair condition. The Atalanta left Port Angeles at 1 p. m. to go to her assistance. The Alitak, a 115-ton wooden fishing vessel, is owned by the Alaska Packers' Association. The Alitak was bound from Chignik, Alaska, to San Francisco.

in the city of Vienna and the country of Austria."

"The great heart of labor," he said, "goes out in sympathy with a protest against the persecution of the masses in Austria. We believe right eventually will prevail and injustice will be remedied."

Winter told the convention the late Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria was "no master of things at that time. At first he tried to become a partner of Herr Hitler but they became tools of Mussolini."

Old Battle Revived.

Some of the resolutions revived the old battle over the organization of the federation's executive council. They express the view the management will be made more representative of the workers if it is approximately doubled.

The demand for vertical organization rather than horizontal—that is, the banding together of workers by industries, rather than trade unions—made its expected appearance. A resolution sponsored by R. F. Lowry and Florence Hanson, delegates of the American Federation of Teachers, claimed vertical organization would give labor a more effective voice in the large-scale, mass production industries. It would have the federation prepare for industrial unions by framing charters for such groups.

The company union issue was raised in a resolution by Delegate John P. Frey, of the metal trades department. He asserted company unions sprang up after enactment of the National industrial recovery act "in open violation of section 7(a) of the act."

He chraged "an evident determination on the part of many employers to ignore and to violate section 7(a)" and called upon the federation to father legislation "which will more definitely make it an illegal action for any employer, directly or indirectly, or through his agents, to in any manner interfere with the form of organization his employes may choose."

Other resolutions were designed to give Negro workers industrial and organization rights "independent of the accident of color."

Firemen's Problems Up.

A group of resolutions dealing with firemen's problems condemned certain cities standing against unionization of firefighters. One resolution dealt with the Norfolk, Va., situation, and another with that in Atlantic City, N. J. Another asked for an 8-hour day for firemen.

Blame for the Morro Castle fire with its heavy loss of life, as well as the destruction of the Princess Sofia and the Vestris, was laid to "inefficient and insufficient crews" by the delegation from the International Seamen's Union. A resolution would have the federation urge the United States Senate Foreign Relations Committee to report against the "safety of life at sea" treaty.

The delegation brought in another proposal to apply racial exclusion laws to seamen on ships flying the American flag.

Another resolution proposed convention legislation on banking reform, looking to nationalizing of banking and credit.

Navy Yard Demands.

Dissatisfaction of Pacific Coast workers in navy yards with employment provided cropped out in a measure introduced by A. W. Hoch, of the California State Federation. It recited "the present productive capacity of the United States Navy yards and arsenals are not used to the greatest advantage, due to lack of work" and work is done in private yards while Government facilities are idle. The resolution would seek legislation "that no naval vessels, ordnance work or military equipment be manufactured in private establishments until the present capacity of Government plants shall have been fully utilized."

One of the resolutions on unemployment insurance would put the federation on record as "unalterably opposed to any plan of unemployment insurance, State or Federal, which is based on the prinicple of separate company reserves," and demands that only such plans be considered as call for one fund for the Nation or State, "to which all employes in the State or Nation should contribute" and to which they could look for compensation. The convention would be asked to "declare itself vigorously in favor of a system of compulsory unemployment insurance for the Nation and for the respective States."

Postal Aid Ends 37 Years' Service; Off Only 6 Days

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 2 (Spl.). Robert A. Clohan, clerk in the postoffice here, was retired, yesterday, after 37 years of service, with only 6 days' leave during that entire period, and none since 1922.

He did not use the 124 days of sick leave which he accumulated during his service. He entered the service in 1898 and was the oldest retired. He is the son of the late employe in point of service when Postmaster Alex Clohan.

Mayor and Council To Aid Rate Fight

Baltimore, Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Mayor George W. Legge, of Cumberland, and the entire city council will attend the Potomac Edison Co. rate case hearing before the Public Service Commission next Thursday, officials of the P. S. C. said today.

The Cumberland officials will be present at the request of Lewis M. Wilson, city solicitor of Cumberland. Herman M. Moser, people's counsel for Maryland, said Mayor Legge probably would not be called to the witness stand. Mayor Legge will take no active part in the proceedings unless it becomes necessary, it was said.

Consideration of the rate case has been before the Public Service Commission for several days. Last Saturday the commission adjourned the hearing until Thursday. Civic organizations and private interests in Western Maryland are seeking a cut in power rates.

Man Accused by Jury In Traffic Fatality

A Prince Georges County coroner's jury late Monday night returned a verdict holding Edwin Donaldson, 23, of the 300 block Channing street northeast, for the grand jury in connection with the death of Edward Barker, 60, killed by an automobile.

Donaldson, charged with manslaughter, is alleged to have been the driver of the car in which Barker, a resident of Frostburg, Md., was riding when it crashed into another at Berwyn three weeks ago. The inquest was held before Justice of the Peace George S. Phillips at Berwyn.

penaed records because of his belief they should not be exposed to public scrutiny.

Against Exposing Papers.

The direct question was asked him:

"Are you of the opinion that, in the interest of international relationships, the papers should not be placed in the record?"

The question was ruled out by Justice Jennings Bailey because it called for an "opinion." The jurist himself then took over the questioning, explaining that whether the papers should be produced was a matter for him to decide.

"I can not see," Secretary Wallace said, "how the report (of the interdepartmental committee, composed of officials of the State, War and Agriculture Department) could avoid touching on international relationships."

"Is it your desire that the reports be disclosed?" he was asked.

Justice Bailey asked:

"Is it against the public interest to place those documents in the record?"

"Yes," Wallace replied.

"Why?" the jurist queried.

"I feel it would bring under discussion by uninformed people things which might not be in the public interest, particularly since they deal with matters bound to do with our relationships with Cuba."

That ended the matter for the time being, for Justice Bailey did not continue the questioning and did not make a ruing.

Motion to Dismiss Up Today.

With Wallace still on the stand, it was discovered that the Government, in its answer, had incorporated a motion to dismiss the suit. Justice Bailey held that the motion should be disposed of first, and he adjourned court until today, when he will take up the dismissal request. No witnesses will be heard.

Prior to that, counsel for the producers had charged that the years 1930, 1931 and 1932, which were "taken as representative years" in figuring the allotment to be awarded the islands, were not in fact representative, intimating the entire basis used for computing the quota was illegal.

In demanding dismissal, Government attorneys advanced several points upon which they based their request. These were, the plaintiffs failed to show injury, the fixing of quotas was a proper exercise of commerce powers, Congress has plenary powers to fix sugar quotas for Hawaii under its Territorial powers, the quotas fixed for Hawaii do not violate the due process clause, the act does not violate the Constitutional requirement that no preference be given to the ports of one State over those of another, the processing tax on sugar is not unconstitutional and may not be enjoined, the act does not unconstitutionally delegate legislative cost, use Post Classified Ads.

For quick results at the lowest powers, the Secretary has not exceeded his power, the suit is one against the Government and can not be maintained.

Library Annex Strike Settled Within Hours

Contractor Agrees to Hire Union Labor Only After 255 Walk Out.

One of Washington's shortest strikes came to an end only a few hours after it began yesterday, and today more than 255 union workmen on the Library of Congress annex, who were called off the job at noon, will return to work.

Settlement of the strike was achieved yesterday afternoon in the office of David Lynn, Capitol architect, when F. M. Biggs, president of the Washington Building Trades Council; John Locher, secretary of the organization, and other executives and business representatives of the body conferred with D. Catalano, contractor against whom the protest leading to the walkout was lodged.

Catalano, president of D. Catalano & Son, agreed yesterday to employ only union men on his project of digging a tunnel which will connect the old Library of Congress with the new annex.

The strike was called when union leaders said Catalano was using nonunion labor along with union steam shovel operators on the job. Union labor struck on Catalano's job last week.

The Washington Building Trades Council delivered the union ultimatum through a delegation of organized labor to the contractor and to Government officials of the office of the architect of the Capitol.

For a long time the controversy between organized labor and Catalano has been under way, since Catalano was brought before the District Commissioners on charges of forcing his workmen on a school to "kick back" part of their wages.

Appeals Court Suspends Order for Taxi Meters

Earlier, the court had affirmed the order of the Commission; but subsequent legislation by Congress rendered the order ineffective.

Beating The Air.

Directors of the Republican Congressional campaign are elated over the disaffection of 14 prominent Democrats. The words of these men, who are courageous enough to place principle above partisanship, are being used to demonstrate that the Democratic party is being "scuttled" by those who have its destiny in keeping.

In making this solicitous discovery, however, the Republican campaign directors seem to have overlooked the efforts of Senators Borah, Norris, Frazier and Nye to bring about the reelection of Senator La Follette, who has bolted the Republican party in Wisconsin and is running as a Progressive New Dealer with the blessing of President Roosevelt. Nor is mention made of other Republican candidates, as Harry Nice in Maryland, who are sedulously courting New Deal bounties at the expense of their party's stated principles.

Emphasis by a divided minority upon a schism in the majority party's ranks is equivalent to beating the air. Resort to such outworn political methods is no substitute for a virile opposition at a time when grave National issues are at stake.

Revolt In Rumson.

Tucked away in the afterpart of the Saturday Review of Literature reposes a request for information that is, to say the least, touching. It also may seem a trifle alarming to those who are easily alarmed.

The president of a woman's club, in Rumson, N. J., at that, writes in for a list of books on the Literature of Revolt. It seems that the organization has decided, no doubt after much debate, to devote its autumnal seminar to a serious study of this subject. The revolt books desired must cover the moral, political, sociological, and economic fields. There is no attempt to play favorites.

Whether the good ladies of Rumson are indicative of a National trend, or whether the desire for these books merely indicates that the husbands of Rumson are spending too much time on the golf course, we have no way of knowing. But remembering that it was only a few years ago when a lecture by Richard Halliburton was considered a mental stimulus by almost any woman's club, we find the change in taste invigorating.

Well may the ladies of Rumson read George Soule and Stuart Chase. Undiluted Marx may be bought for 95 cents. But what will Secretary Wallace say when he sees the Review placing his forthcoming book in the category of revolution, not evolution?

That, however, is beside the point. What is significant is the desire of the ladies to learn all about The Changing American Scene as Shown in Literature at their Thursday afternoon gatherings. It may interfere a bit with bridge to start reading Brooks Adams, Lenin, Lyford Edwards, or even John Strachey. But we venture to suggest that, if Mr. Hamilton Fish does not have Rumson read out of the Union, the ladies will not regret their choice.

Education Is Not Enough.

Having just established a new all-time monthly record for traffic fatalities, Washington should be particularly interested in the proceedings of the National Safety Council, meeting in Cleveland. Certainly the local record of 16 deaths from motor accidents in September indicates the urgent need for a more effective approach to the traffic safety problem.

In his opening address to the safety conference John E. Long, president of the council, listed four chief reasons for the sudden increase in automobile fatalities: (1) relaxed law enforcement; (2) old vehicles unsafe from wear and neglect; (3) greater speed of newer cars; (4) increased use of liquor by motorists.

It is especially interesting to note that "relaxed law enforcement" is placed at the head of the list. This is a deficiency which can not be corrected by safety campaigns, however effective they may be within their own limitations. Only an adequate, alert and highly efficient police force can reduce the number of accidents resulting from flagrant violation of traffic rules.

The District's safety campaign is doubtless encouraging the average motorist to drive more carefully. To this extent, it is entirely constructive. More "Voices of Safety" and more voluntary observers probably would impress upon the public the ever-present danger of careless driving. It is difficult to understand, in this connection, why local authorities declined the offer of a local firm to donate a car for this purpose.

Every effort of this kind is likely to be ineffective, however, unless it is supported by strict safety regulations with rigorous enforcement. Dilapidated cars are licensed in the District year after year, with no check upon their mechanical reliability. Examination of drivers is superficial. Entirely too few licenses are revoked for drunken driving, gross carelessness or temperamental instability.

In other words, the cause of many accidents can never be eliminated by "education." Important as this aspect of the problem is, it can be only supplementary to the elimination of obvious traffic hazards which are too frequently ignored.

At San Francisco.

In the city where local trade unionism last summer conducted a spectacular general strike, the American Federation of Labor is now holding its fifty-fourth annual convention. The internal problems before the historic organization are formidable. And the policy decisions which confront the convention are of the utmost importance to the future of the labor movement.

That the A. F. of L. is undergoing a difficult evolutionary process has for some time been apparent. Inward indications of this strain are found in such tendencies as the stubbornly contested effort to change the basic form of organization from "horizontal" to "vertical"—from craft to industrial unionism. Outward indications may be seen in the wave of strikes which the country has been experiencing, often forced by "rank and file" leaders over the disapproval, if not the open resistance, of old-school union officials. In the organized labor movement, almost more than elsewhere, the ferment of the times has been working actively, bringing to the fore new forces, new men, new methods.

The basic difficulty which runs like a theme through the internal problems of the A. F. of L. is much easier to state than to solve. The federation has traditionally been the aristocratic organization of skilled craft workers, who have gained much for favored groups, but who have been relatively indifferent to the cause of labor as a whole. Now, as the result of the changing attitude epitomized by section 7(a) of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the opportunity for mass organization has opened to the federation.

Its leaders seek to seize this opportunity. They want to multiply five-fold or more the membership of 2,500,000 to which the federation had sunk two years ago. And this, some desire to accomplish without any substantial change in trade union philosophy, structure or direction. To state the problem in that way is to raise doubts as to whether its solution is possible.

The A. F. of L. in the past has had a high sense of responsibility to its limited membership. But there is no injustice in saying that its sense of responsibility to society has been smaller. On the whole, strikes have been called when it seemed possible to win strikes—not when industrial warfare would have been least disturbing to the Nation. Dearly won gains in working conditions have been maintained for the benefit of the highly organized, with little consideration of the effects of rigid standards on the welfare of the employed population as a whole. There is no disparagement of A. F. of L. policy in stating these facts. Probably no other policy in the past would have been at all practical.

The situation greatly alters, however, with the development of trade unionism as an inclusive rather than exclusive organization. Tactics which were tolerable, when applied by a limited number of workers, may readily become destructive of our economic system if indorsed wholesale. And it is the instinctive realization of this fact which makes many employers today resist the trend toward compulsory trade unionism. They feel that this trend necessitates an alteration in the philosophy of organized labor which has not yet come to pass.

The problem is concretely put in the expression that power implies responsibility. And the evidence that the A. F. of L. is not developing its sense of responsibility in step with the growth of its power is already apparent at San Francisco. It is announced there that the federation will stand "unflinchingly" for the 30-hour week, presumably without corresponding wage reductions. If responsibility were being emphasized as strongly as power such an announcement would be preceded by an effective analysis of whether or not our National economy can support a change of this magnitude at this time. No such analysis is forthcoming.

The real friends of labor—those who wish to see steady and permanent improvement in the living standards of the workers—will look eagerly for signs at this convention of an awakening sense of social responsibility on the part of the A. F. of L. If governmental aid to unionism is invoked, for instance, some offer to surrender traditional liberties should be made in exchange. Obviously it is impossible to have the Government support trade unionism without full labor cooperation in assisting rather than impeding National industrial policies.

Without such agreement to accept social responsibility as the price of industrial power, there can be only one eventual outcome. It is the outcome witnessed in Italy and Germany, where the state has asserted its final authority by destroying free trade unionism altogether. That is an outcome which nobody in the United States desires, least of all, one would suppose, the members of trade unions.

Who's Speaking, Please?

There are some psychologists who hold that each human being is, in a sense, many individuals. But in few people have such contending personalities been combined as were attributed to Miss Frances Robinson when she resigned as the administrative assistant of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson. Sculptor Reuben Nakian declared that he would make a bust of the once most influential woman in the NRA because "she has the wisdom of a Portia and the devotion of a Ruth."

While those words hung upon the autumnal air, somebody asked Miss Robinson whether it was true that the General, on her advice, would make a lecture-tour defending himself and attacking his real or mythical enemies. "That," she is quoted as observing, "is all a lot of apple-sauce."

To which of Miss Robinson's personalities would Sculptor Nakian ascribe this succinct and devastating phrase—to the unprotesting heroine of the Old Testament, or to Shakespeare's polished pleader?

The Crisis In Spain.

Spain is confronted by her most serious political crisis since the republic was proclaimed in April, 1931. Premier Samper and his cabinet have resigned after a scathing attack in the Cortes by Jose Maria Gil Robles, leader of the Catholic and landed-property blocs. In view of the prevailing tension, and the obvious difficulty of forming another government, this event may signalize a momentous turning point in the history of the republic.

The immediate cause of the cabinet's fall is a controversy with the autonomous and separatist province of Catalonia. Last March the Catalan legislature passed a measure intended to give peasants title to the land they cultivate within 12 years. On appeal this confiscatory law was declared unconstitutional by the national courts. Catalonia's Left delegates withdrew from the Cortes in protest, and the provincial government at Barcelona promptly repassed the invalidated measure. Bitter feeling was aroused on both sides, and the Catalonian government notified Madrid, in effect, that secession would be the only alternative to a change of attitude on the part of the central government.

Premier Samper effected a compromise of this issue, which apparently satisfied no one. His resignation came after he had been denounced for making "weak and disgraceful concessions to a rebellious region." The Catalonian muddle, however, is only one incident in a complicated parliamentary situation which is causing unrest throughout Spain. In fact, the Left groups in control of the government at Barcelona are said to have pressed the land issue for the special purpose of embarrassing the Madrid government and thus bringing about dissolution of parliament.

Formation of a new cabinet will be especially difficult because of the multiplicity and rivalry of the parties represented in the national legislature. As the result of an unwise electoral law, which places a premium upon the combination of blocs, however incompatible they may be, the Cortes is controlled by the Right and Radical parties. The republican groups, which campaigned independently, were crushed. "Rarely in any country," says Luis Araquistain, writing in Foreign Affairs, "has any parliament so falsely represented the national will as the second parliament of the Spanish Republic."

This law remains in effect, and the anti-republican groups of the existing Cortes can prevent its repeal. Consequently, the Socialists refuse to participate in the national election at this time. And the Left extremists threaten to bring about a second revolution if the predominating Center and Right parties continue to rule. Spain's powerful anarchistic groups are as anxious to destroy the republic as they were to topple the throne of Alfonso.

Factionalism is always inimical to representative government. In Spain division of the electorate into many antagonistic groups is aggravated by separatist movements in some of the provinces and by the widespread illiteracy of the people. There seems to be very little sentiment in favor of the monarchy, and a Fascist dictatorship would be equally intolerable to the great majority. Strong-arm rule, however, is always just beyond the horizon when parliamentary institutions show inability to function.

Royal October.

October connotes the very heart and essence of Autumn's glory. For one thing, it is the harvesting month, consummating all that has gone before during the year—man's overt labor and nature's unseen travail in generating and ripening for man the multiple fruits of earth and tree and vine. Compensation, vindication—all the elements that make up the idea of fruition—are thus physically associated with October's beneficent career of days; while the harvest moon gives poetic, mystic luster to this season of seasons.

Yes, October cometh like a king, and his stately march has the royal pomp befitting his estate. He is clothed with raiment purple, crimson, and gold, his mantle of foliage trailing ever Southward as the crisp frost touches the leaves on mountainside, plain and valley, turning their decay into sacrificial, triumphant wonders of beauty.

In the North Atlantic section tourists are already pouring through the Berkshires, and soon the whole range of Appalachian Mountains will be displaying autumn's most glorious banners. Latitude will follow latitude in swift succession, while along the coast the salt marshes take on deeper and deeper tinges of red—often dusky red—in lowly participation in the pageantry.

And the king marches on. The whole country feels his magic and happily witnesses his annually recurrent manifestation of majesty. The king passes on, and as his train fades from sight, the supreme glory of the year passes with him.

The corn crop in the South is unusually promising this season. Many farmers are anticipating an average yield per acre of 30 gallons of farm relief.

"The best way to keep healthy is to eat two days and skip one," declares a physician. Healthful, perhaps; but awfully hard on the shoes.

Mile Posts

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

THOUSANDS WERE SLAIN by Belgian guns as Antwerp forts repulsed all German attacks. Sixty thousand refugees arrived from Ghent, Bruges, Coutrai and Ostend. Seven hundred thousand faced starvation in Brussels.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE wrote Representative Levy, of New York, owner of Monticello, Thomas Jefferson's home, that he thought it would be a patriotic move to offer the historic property for sale during the Democratic Administration.

Government Architecture.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The State Department Building, prominent in architecture's chamber of horrors, was built when the fad was to dab an edifice with ornament, having no special starting or stopping point. The power of simplicity in design was temporarily remembered by the few. McKim, Mead & White, architects, somewhat later, reverted to simplicity, even designing skyscrapers with some ornament at the bottom, more at the top, with a great expanse of plainness between. Few dared follow immediately in their footsteps.

As to the $60,000,000 worth of buildings on the Avenue, recently produced, history will criticize little of their design. The huge Commerce Building, its north and south wings respectfully subordinate to the central portion, challenges the Romans' great gift for plan. On the Justice Building the purity of style with which the Greek ornament is used makes it classic. Whether the 78 columns of the Archives Building are too high or not may be a matter of taste, yet 24 centuries of precedent stand behind it.

When the Government drew upon the genius of America's best architects they gave their best to these buildings. No instructed mind will compare them with a slip of the l'Art Nouveau period, raising the question of taste.

Mr. McGowan, whose letter you print, might read Steffanson's "Standardization of Error." Surely, few have actually known an old lady to kiss a cow, admitting it to be a matter of taste.

EDWARD G. SCHARF.
Washington, Oct. 1.

Worry, Worry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the last few years America has gone over to the lawless element and now thinking men tremble with fear and horror. Conditions are getting worse and worse all the time. One year from now, in my opinion, there will be 20,000,000 people to be fed and clothed by the Government. The rich will have to feed and clothe the poor who cannot find work, or see them starve. Who is responsible for all these things?

I have been studying the history of the ancient countries and from this, added to my own observations, obtained as a world-wide traveler, I find that the sins that are eating the heart out of America are the same sins that caused the overthrow of the nations of the past.

There never was a period in the world's history that has known such culture, such architecture, philosophy, learning, and statesmanship as the golden age of Pericles. There never has been a government that has been so powerful as that of ancient Rome.

The sins of the people ruined the government of Rome and Greece, and sins of America will ruin America. We must have a spiritual recovery before we can have an economic and moral recovery. We have had a spiritual bankruptcy in the homes as well as in the churches and these are the places where our work should begin.

One hundred Presidents like Roosevelt cannot bring this country back to normalcy, as long as it is in the hands of the liquor crowd. Repeal has failed and every one knows it, if he thinks at all. Pre-election promises have failed. Greed has taken possession of the people and they have forgotten God. We need to come back to God.

We need preachers to preach the word like Jeremiah did in Jerusalem and Elijah did in Samaria, when they called the people to repentance for their sins. Pastors in Washington should preach like Paul did in Ephesus when he condemned the idolatry in the worship of Diana of the Ephesians.

Impressionisms.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All columns published by The Post Impressionist are read here with keen interest—some of them are clipped and sent in various directions, even to friends abroad. But the stories "Hat-Check Girl," "Merely Mary-Ann" and "Only A Dog" are too good to part with; they have been filed.

That sketch of the boy and the dog seemed to center around the site of our old home at Eighteenth and H streets. There for years we had a red-brown Irish setter that was the pet of the neighborhood. He and our love for him came vividly to mind as I read of Gyp and Jerry.

The world would be better for them if other scholarly writers would indulge in such humane recollections and pen wholesome uplifting stories like those of The Post Impressionist. Now, does not that frank praise entitle his readers to know his name?

INNO McGILL.
Haymarket, Va., Sept. 24.

Constitutional.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The so-called Liberty League took advantage of the celebration of Constitution Day verbally to condemn President Roosevelt and his efforts to help the people help themselves, to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, house the homeless and save those homes which were mortgaged. The people, according to some of these orators, have a Constitutional right to "starve to death" unmolested.

It is wonderful how many political orators came to the defense of the Constitution this year. We think it was Mme. Roland who remarked many years ago, "O liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name!"

We would like to refer some of the critics of the present Administration to the opinions of President George Washington, who admitted the "imperfections" of the Constitution and pointed to the "door" for future amendments and alterations; also to the opinions of a long line of judges from Chief Justice Marshall down to the present day, on the feasibility of the Constitution.

D. MAGRUDER SIMPSON.
Washington, Oct. 1.

Key-Industry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You put your finger on the spot in your editorial of September 29, namely, "The Heart."

I believe it to be generally conceded that the building industry and its allied interests are the largest employers in the world. Consequently when that industry is active business generally is good, and the reverse is the case when it becomes inactive.

I have drawings for new, large and financially sound construction projects in this and other cities, aggregating about 2¼ million dollars, and I could get them going almost immediately if first mortgage money were available. I suppose there are other architects similarly situated. People can talk and harangue until doomsday, but we simply can not and will not have prosperous times until the building game gets going. When money for that purpose is made available, a spirit of optimism will become prevalent almost immediately. MICHAEL HEISTER.
Washington, Sept. 29.

How Long?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much has been written and spoken within the last two years of the causes and remedies for human ills in the social, economic, and political fields. Nothing comes out of all this, however, except more and more confusion, more uncertainty.

A vast majority, led by the present Administration, seems headed for Socialism. This is verified by the vote in Maine for a mess of pottage, and the nomination in California of an outstanding Socialist candidate for Governor. All this has come because we have grown weary of traveling the tedious, but honest, path of common sense. We now want to eat our cake and keep it at the same time.

One hundred and fifty years ago Benjamin Franklin said: "He that goes borrowing, goes sorrowing, and so will he who lendeth and goeth to get it back again." This warning must apply to governments as surely as to individuals.

This Government is now in the same condition as an individual who takes no nourishment and tries to live from his tissues. How soon will our National tissues be exhausted? At the rate we are going—not long. "OBSERVER."

Closed Banks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every day one reads about recovery and the New Deal, but there is never a word about Roosevelt doing anything for depositors in closed banks. Twenty million depositors voted for him and he has done nothing for us. The McLeod bill passed—Roosevelt vetoed it.

The Government is responsible for the condition of these banks, yet, up to date, the Government has done nothing to help depositors.

Newspapers

There are people—few, it is to be hoped—who refuse to read newspapers. There are many who read current news with a sense of disturbance and protest. Sometimes they say in a tone of disapproval that too much space is given to crime and to unfortunate occurrences.

Every good newspaper welcomes criticism and tries to learn from its critics. Every issue of every good newspaper represents the endeavor of many persons to bring to the readers that which a normal reading public wants to know.

Stories of crime have to be printed because they are news and because for its own protection society should be informed of happenings that menace peace and security. If such news seems to be given more display in the newspapers it is because the shock of untoward events gives temporary stimulus to public interest.

Those who are disturbed by accounts of occasional revolting occurrences should consider how exceptional they are in the course of the general life of the community. Think of all the millions of decent, law-abiding folks who go about their normal activities by day and are safe and undisturbed in their homes at night.

The recognition of the newspapers given this great majority of humanity is in those numerous bulky departments that never mention crime or abnormality. Here are found literary reviews and discussions; reports and criticisms of entertainment; accounts of social affairs; helpful information for homemakers; amusing anecdotes; accounts of community progress; facts for those pursuing special lines of study; news of political and economic affairs, and the efforts of trained specialists to help normal people in their various interests and activities.

Glance through the newspaper when inclined to be pessimistic and see how preponderant is the space given to interests that are normal and constructive.

Weigh-In for Your Drink.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

DON'T get drunk.

It was bad form to get drunk, before the prohibition era. It was only during the prohibition era that some people thought it was funny to get drunk—and they then thought it funny merely because naturally anarchistic human nature is naturally opposed to law.

Today, however, it is once again bad form to get drunk.

Mrs. Emily Post says so. Nearly everybody, as usual, agrees with her.

* * *

* * *

And don't propound those foolish old twin-queries: "How am I to know when I've had enough? Do you mean to tell me that I mustn't drink at all?"

* * *

We do not mean to tell you that. To drink or not to drink is not the question. We aren't going into the ethics of drinking in the abstract—or drinking anywhere else where drinks are served. We are addressing ourselves to that minority of the American population which thinks it no wrong for one to drink if one doesn't take a drop too plenty. Nor are we even addressing this minority upon any responsibility of our own.

* * *

We are referring you to Dr. H. W. Haggard.

* * *

Legal authorities have long differred as to what amount of alcohol was too much. There was a Rightist magistrate in Philadephia who decided to adjudge no prisoner drunk unless he couldn't literally walk a chalk line. There was a Centrist in New York who applied the historic "truly rural" test. And Chicago possessed an extreme Leftist whose definition of a drunk was a man who, having drunk so much that he fell, couldn't get up.

* * *

* * *

Dr. Haggard is twice a doctor—M. D. and Ph. D. When he had headquarters in Washington he was physiologist for the United States Bureau of Mines. Since then he has written "Devils, Drugs and Doctors" (of which there is an excellent cheap edition on sale at all drug stores) and the never-to-be-forgotten "Schadliche Gase." He was a member of the Third Resuscitation Commission. Now he is associate professor at Yale's Sheffield School.

At least, that is what he is if he is the Dr. Howard Wilcox Haggard we think he is.

* * *

Well, then, what does Dr. Haggard say?

* * *

He says: "It is now a well-established fact that the degree of intoxication depends upon the concentration of alcohol in the brain. The concentration in the brain follows closely the concentration in the blood of the arteries . . . For a sort of rule of thumb the following generalization appears to apply in most cases and needs only a little simple mathematics to link it to the cocktail or highball . . .

* * *

"The maximum concentration reached in the blood and brain corresponds to the amount of alcohol drunk divided by the weight of the consumer. It is somewhat higher for strong drinks and lower for mild ones. Four cocktails, say, three ounces of alcohol, drunk by a man weighing 187 pounds (about 3,000 ounces) would yield a concentration of 3 divided by 3,000; expressed on the basis of 100, it would correspond to one-tenth of 1 per cent. In a woman of half that weight the percentage would be twice as high. In both the man and the woman, it would rise or fall correspondingly if the cocktails were 6 or 2, or any other value."

* * *

There you have it from Dr. Haggard. He wrote it for the summer issue of the unimpeachable Yale Review. If we are slow in passing the information on to you, don't blame us. The fault is not ours. We have been delayed because his article proved so popular that the office copy never, until today, rested long enough in the office files for us to give it the study it deserved.

* * *

And now time presses.

* * *

We can but note that here is another argument against the fad for thinness. We can but predict that every blind bar in the Capital will soon have its weighing machine (studiously scanned by the barmen) and that, at private houses, the doorman will escort you to the hall scales when he takes your coat, presenting you with a certified copy of their findings, which you must in turn hand to the butler who subsequently serves the aperitifs. We can but advise you to buy stock in a scales manufacturing corporation.

The Chinese Puzzled.

THE Administration's answer to the Chinese inquiry as to what in the name of goodness it is we did to silver will, of course, have to be confined to a simple statement that the inquiry has been referred to Senators Borah, Thomas, Wheeler, Kendrick et al., who are the only ones who know and who are not in Washington at present. As to whether they received a tip-off that this inquiry was coming and skipped the city is something, of course, I am not prepared to state.

BARGERON

The fact remains that the inquiry—at least the State Department says that is all it is—is here and there is nobody here to answer it.

We demand miracles of our Presidents, demand that they make it rain and that they make it quit raining, but I doubt that anyone of us would be so unreasonable as to expect Mr. Roosevelt to explain to the Chinese what our purpose was in meddling with silver, or not so much our purpose, as to what we hoped to accomplish.

The silver policy was not Mr. Roosevelt's. Like most of the rest of us he could not see how it would do the things claimed for it at all. It was the policy of Messrs. Borah, Thomas, Wheeler, Kendrick, et al. Mr. Roosevelt simply agreed under pressure to put it into effect for them. He certainly should not be expected to explain it.

There is reason to believe that he had given up hope of ever understanding it even before he acquiesced to the silverites' demands. He sent Prof. Rogers, one of his monetary experts, to China to study the question and the latter's experience was such that it is now understood he insists he was not down there to study the question but to explain it to the Chinese, instead. Regardless of whether he went to China as a student or as an explainer the understanding is that he was so discouraged in his interviews with the officials whose names he carried with him that he cabled the State Department for another list. Presumably he thought he would be more successful in studying with, or explaining to, the second group.

Apparently he got nowhere with the second group because the Chinese note, or "inquiry," plainly reveals that the Chinese are still very baffled, indeed. They are so baffled, in fact, by this effort of ours to increase their purchasing power, that they threaten to go on the gold standard.

Parenthetically, they are, of course, an ungrateful race. They never have seemed to appreciate our missionaries half as much as we appreciated sending them and also, according to Senator Nye, they traded the wheat which we sold them so very cheaply to some other country for munitions. I understand this statement by the Senator has been denied by the Chinese, but even so they must be an ungrateful people not to appreciate how Senators Borah, Thomas, Wheeler, Kendrick et al greatly increased their purchasing power, increased it everywhere, except in China, where most of the Chinese live.

I do not think our unhappy experience in this instance should be permitted to belittle the silverites or the Progressive political faith which they adhere to. Manifestly, if they remain fugitives from justice it will look pretty bad, but in due time I am satisfied they will come back with an explanation of some sort.

As a matter of fact, insofar as their political faith is concerned, it is a philosophy that believes in experimenting, in trying, in attempting, in the hope that something will be accomplished whether it is the thing they set out to accomplish or not. In this case, there has been a very definite accomplishment. We have broken down the inscrutability of the Chinese which has been their characteristic ever since the beginning of time. They are not inscrutable at all in this matter. There is a very definite expression on their faces. It is one of bewilderment!

That's an accomplishment similar to the claim that going off the gold standard brought about an arrest in the Lindbergh case.

COL. THADDEUS HAROLD BROWN, vice chairman, Broadcast Division, Federal Communications Commission. Farm born, he started his career as a country school teacher, later becoming secretary of state of Ohio and missing the governorship by a narrow margin. Came to the new commission with the indorsement of former Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio. Lawyer by profession, he served as general counsel of the commission in 1929, and was appointed to the second zone commissionership by President Hoover. Credited with much of radio law now written on the statute books during his incumbency. A "Bull Mooser," he was a Presidential elector and delegate at large at Republican National conventions. Keenly interested in farming, he specializes in stock raising—particularly Guernseys and Long Horns. A Presbyterian, he is a member of Phi Kappa Psi, the American Legion, is a thirty-second degree Mason, and served during the war as a captain and major. Large, affable and handsome, he shines at social functions.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Japan Only 'Bluffing' in Threat On Russia, Says Chinese Hero

Gen. Tsai Ting-Kai Sees War Scare Concealing Nippon's Real Goal.

Baltimore, Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Danger of war between Japan and Russia was scorned today by Gen. Tsai Ting-Kai, Chinese commander of the Nineteenth Route Army, whose defense of Shanghai from Japanese attack in 1932 made him one of the heroes of the nation. Gen. Ting-Kai is in Baltimore, on a tour of the world.

Discussing the possibilities of a Japanese-Russian war, the Chinese soldier indicated that he believes Japan has aims other than an invasion of Siberia, but is using the Russian war scare as a cloak to conceal her real goal.

"It is silly to talk of war between Japan and Russia," he said. "There will be no war. Japan has no aim in Russia. She is only bluffing to draw the attention of the world from her real goal. I can not say what that goal is. I will leave that to you.

"To prove my point, there has been war talk for two years, and nothing has happened. Nothing will happen. It is just a matter of bargaining over the price of a railroad. You can be sure Japan has no interest in Russia, and Russia is not concerned with Japan."

Europe is too poor to finance another war, the general said. He is interested in the New Deal in the United States, and said he believes it has accomplished much.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—President Frank P. Graham of the University of North Carolina will be the principal speaker at the University of Virginia's 111th convocation exercises tomorrow.

The exercises, dedicating the formal opening of the 1934-35 session, will be attended by members of the board of visitors, governing body of the university, the faculty and students. President John Lloyd Newcomb will confer intermediate honors upon students who have made distinguished grades during their first two years in college.

Virginia Compensation Fight May Go to Court

Richmond, Va., Oct. 2 (AP).—The State's claim for excess compensation paid to Geddes H. Winston, former collector of overdue taxes, has been referred by the State comptroller's office to the attorney general for appropriate action, Comptroller E. R. Combs, said today, indicating that a suit might be necessary.

Last winter the State auditor reported Mr. Winston had been overpaid to the extent of $18,150.60. Later it was reported an agreement had been reached under which Mr. Winston would pay back $7,000, but today Mr. Combs said Mr. Winston had informed him he would not be able to comply with the State's demands.

H. I. Phillips' Once Over

Those New Rules.

New rules issued by the Federal Reserve Board fix margin requirements at 25 to 45 per cent of the price of the stock, and the day when only a shirt and a shoestring were needed to become a market plunger are ended.

• • • •

No more will the telephonic order, "Buy me 100 shares of Steel at the market; I still have a balance of 30 cents with you," be customary.

• • • •

The broker who used to accept a few marbles, some cigarette coupons and your wife's wedding ring to open an account is outlawed. From now on the difference between a stock exchange and a crap game is to be visible for 300 feet at all times.

• • • •

The Federal Reserve Board issued its new rules a few days ago. They are harder to understand than the new football rules.

• • • •

People already in the market will not come under them. This is the same thing as showing clemency to a sick man.

• • • •

The regulations apply only to persons opening new accounts. And anybody entering the stock market today will have no trouble getting money for margins, as he will be able to collect plenty under the Carnegie Hero Awards.

• • • •

In fact, anybody with nerve enough to open a stock market account today could probably get $10,000 a week in vaudeville.

• • • •

One of the laughs in the Federal Reserve Board regulations is a ruling that a margin of 45 per cent need be put up only in the case of stocks known as "fast movers." A "fast mover" is a stock that has jumped an eighth of a point since Groundhog Day.

• • • •

All in all, the rules appear to be above criticism. They will keep the office boy, delicatessen clerk, bootblack, stenographer and ice man from fancy skating on thin ice.

• • • •

Mother will have a better chance of getting shoes for baby during a declining market, and the old man will have to limit his gambling to the Irish Sweepstakes, slot machines and punch board.

• • • •

But the rules are going to be very hard on the millions of Americans who are never happy unless they are losing money.

• • • •

As Quillen Looks at It

The Game Is Over.

The world is beginning to understand that its age-old economic scheme can not survive without continuous expansion.

There is no good in having profits if there is nothing to do with them.

The scheme of capitalism is very simple.

You work until you have saved a small surplus. Then you invest this surplus in tools and raw material and hire a few men to work for you.

Each man who works for you makes his own wages plus a profit for you. Otherwise you wouldn't and couldn't hire him.

If you hire a few men, your profit is small. If you hire 1,000 it may be larger. What will you do with it?

If it is more than you and a spoiled family can spend, you use it to build more factories to employ more men to make more goods to get more profit.

Money represents the supply of chips in a game. It can not be withdrawn from use or the game would stop.

Therefore the world's capitalists have expanded continuously since the beginning of industrialism.

What enabled them to do it?

Better methods of agriculture, manufacture, sanitation and disease control enabled the world's population to increase continually. More people consumed more goods.

As production multiplied, men built ships to search for new markets. New lands were discovered and railroads built to open up virgin territory. Surplus capital found investment in mines, forests and oil fields. It bought concessions to exploit the resources of undeveloped countries.

In the nature of things there had to be a stopping place—a saturation point.

There are no more lands to discover; no frontiers to open. Populations are beginning to wane. The world can produce more than it needs. All who can buy have been supplied. Competitors fight one another for established markets. Nations arm to defend their foreign trade.

In short, capitalism has reached the point where it has an enormous surplus of capital and no place to use it.

Today it is lending its surplus to the Government, which borrows to feed the jobless.

It isn't a question of whether we desire a new game. The old game stops itself when the banker has all the chips.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Some Fine Novels.

IT'S seldom enough that one can find half a dozen novels waiting on the shelf which are as excellent, in their varied ways, as these today. To my mind they mark one of the peaks of the fall season. They may be the only peak—time alone can tell that.

THEO. HALL.

At the head of the list—and it would have to be a pretty hand-picked list which this book wouldn't head—stands Albert Halper's "The Foundry" (Viking Press, $2.50. Nothing I have read this fall has pleased me so thoroughly.

It is merely the tale of the owners and workmen in a Chicago electrotyping foundry, of the work in the shop itself, and of their lives which branch out from the shop. Everyone in it without exception, from the underfed little errand boys running around with an arm-load of finished plates, to Max'l Steuben, the brains of the concern, Gargantuan, solid, fighting his weak heart, a figure drawn so sharp and clean that it puts, you might say, life to shame. Here are feuds and friendships, blonde-haired gold-diggers and faithful Polack housewives, loyalty and sabotage and hard, hard work. Behind it sounds the constant roar of the machinery—which one of the boys with a "blushing unseen" talent sets down the staves and bars: the "Printing House Blues."

Mr. Halper writes about it all with a geniality for which we should be grateful. Though you might tag his materials proletarian, it would be silly to give the name to his novel. For he has no other ax to grind than to tell us two-score good stories and to show us a gallery of living people we won't forget.

• • • •

Out of drought, poverty, insanity and death on a small Midwestern farm, Miss Josephine Johnson has written a first novel which holds the texture and passion of poetry. "Now in November" (Simon & Schuster, $2) is a book absolutely unique—almost, because Miss Johnson is but 24, incredible. For here we find, after some years of familiarity with the "plain dirt novel," given a beauty and delicacy which no one ever saw in it before.

True, some people may find the style a trifle ingenious and worked-over. But there are others who will savor it as they do their favorite poetry, and grant it that rarest of blue ribbons for a novel—an uncontrollable desire to read it aloud.

With materials no more different than Iowa is from Missouri, Ruth Suckow writes a novel altogether of another sort. "The Folks" (Farrar & Rinehart, $3) is a long (727 pages) uncompressed, patient chronicle—from which the author sits back to let the characters act by themselves. Where Miss Johnson gets her effect by a poetic overtone, Miss Suckow chats in garden-variety speech.

Here, in the Ferguson parents and their two sons and two daughters, is the midwest American family par excellence. Their lives in an Iowa village, in their wanderings to New York or California, are as native to America as the title-phrase itself. No one can be three cousins off from these people—no one can read Miss Suckow's immense achievement without the feeling she has said all that can be said about the center of gravity of the American genus.

Of the time of the western trek 50 years earlier, Louis Dodge gives us another, and only less impressive, long chronicle—"The American" (Julian Messner, $2.50). Though the story of Leander Calvert (an actual man) is largely a true one, there is room for more adventure in the romantic sense. Indians and grizzly bears, the Santa Fee Trail and gold in California give color to the stage setting, but the figure of the American pioneer is quite as typical as Miss Suckow's modern Iowans.

• • • •

Turn now to the well-off French middle class in Le Havre, of which Guy Mazeline writes the 1932 Goncourt Prize novel—"The Wolves" (Macmillan, $2.50). The Jobourgs once had wealth and distinction, now have only wealth. The sons and daughters bring in no laurels. Here is the subtle undermining of the French bourgeoisie told with a good deal of dramatic intensity, set in the midst of an able picturization of seaport life. The 775 pages will not, I'm sure, exhaust your interest in this widespread, complex story.

• • • •

Ignazio Silone, now an anti-Fascisti exile in Zurich, tells the remarkable story of an impoverished little Italian town's revolt against the Fascist banners of Rome in "Fontamara" (Smith & Haas, $2.50).

Quite hopeless, of course, is the struggle. But the fire for independence of these hill-town Italians will make you a little breathless in your chair. Silone records it all superbly, with bone-deep conviction, but not without humor.

St. Francis of Assisi.

(He Died October 3, 1226.)

The wonderful thirteenth century which saw the most magnificent examples of ecclesiastical architecture the world has ever known, which also saw the birth of Dante and his rise to manhood, included also the career of Francis of Assisi, whose personality was so amazing that it inspires millions of people today and is as fresh and beautiful in its influence as a blooming flower.

He was born at Assisi in Italy in 1182; his father was a wealthy merchant. It does not appear that he was dissipated; but he was a whole-hearted ringleader in boyish revels and escapades. When he was 20, he had a severe illness which gave him time for serious reflection. Finally he decided to give all his substance to the poor of the neighborhood; and his father, believing he was a crank, as some other normal fathers have believed their queer sons to be, had him publicly disinherited, which pleased Francis exceedingly. He went on a pilgrimage to Rome, and on his return to his native town, meeting a leper, he overcame his particular horror of that disease and kissed the sufferer's hand.

He founded the great order of the Franciscans, whose rule is poverty. He determined to live as nearly like the daily life of Christ as should be humanly possible; and perhaps no one has come any nearer to that ideal. It is interesting to remember that the intense seriousness of this aim was accompanied by a constant daily cheerfulness and mirth and glow of good nature; in which respect he differed from some of the other famous Christians of history.

In 1224 he went up the lonely mountain of Alverno in the Apennines with a few friends and had 40 days of prayer, fasting and meditation. Sabatier in his "Life of St. Francis" (1893) says:

"A seraph with wings extended flew toward him from the horizon and inundated him with pleasure unutterable. At the center of the vision appeared a cross, and the seraph was nailed to it. When the vision disappeared, Francis felt sharp pains mingling with the delight of the first moment. Disturbed to the center of his being he anxiously sought the meaning of it all, and then he saw on his body the Stigmata of the Crucified."

A very interesting short book is G. K. Chesterton's "St. Francis of Assisi." He was only 44 years old when he died; and two years later he was canonized.

More Openings Will Feature Night Club Life in Washington

By Kay Ware.

Heigh-Ho opens its doors Friday night, offering, in addition to a dance team of note, and the Great Maurice, champagne cocktail and floral favors to all the guests. A gracious gesture on the part of Pete Macias.

Enters and Borgia, who have just ended a long engagement at the Black Restaurant in Chicago, are unusually graceful in photo, and according to Macias, unusually interesting in action. They have made it a point to give the bored night club habitue something new. They also for the applause of the cynic who says, "All dance teams are just alike."

Maurice, of the amazing fingers, can do things with a pack of cards. He has a suave manner, a delightful accent, plus a collection of original tricks.

Cocktail tea-dances at Heigh-Ho will be from 4:45 to 6:45. Maurice will be there to come to your table and interpret your dreams.

Beauties at the Shoreham.

From the looks of the Shoreham floor show, you'd think you were seeing the "Follies." A revue, consisting of chorus of very pretty ladies, and a large collection of stars, Barnee's music, and the beautiful new setting of the ballroom, make the place attractive.

In detail, the ensemble is really the "Glorified Girls," Murray and Allen, "clown princes of Broadway," in impersonations, skits, songs and dances; the Duval Sisters in a Harlem number, in which their eyelids and lips are gilded; three blondes, a girl and two boys, dancing, and there are solo and duo songs.

The blond boys have their hair platinumed regularly. The effect of the light hair plus gray costumes makes you blink.

High Spots: The Harlem number with the gilt faces, a gay-nineties skit with bustles and pantomime, an imitation of Joe Penner, the chorus dancing through the "Wall Street Bears" with long strips of ticker tape.

Miss Barnard says: "They took the flying trapeze off the ceiling over the floor." Sure enough, the ceiling is plain and softly colored with the changing lights. The electrician deserves credit. The ballroom is a masterpiece of lighting.

Bobby Sanford's Revue is booked for several weeks.

Real Bamboo.

Willard's Bamboo Room started off with a swish last Saturday. Real bamboo trees (or are they shrubs?) tickle your ears as you sit on the long settees. The dome reflected in the black top of the tables is a nice effect.

Johnny Slaughter and orchestra go on the job at 4:30, play until 6:30, then rush to the dining room to charm the ears of dinner guests, then back to the Bamboo Room at 10, to play until 1 a. m.

Saturday afternoon they played an Argentine tango and many of the guests seemed to know what to do with it. One couple, particularly, dipped and swayed and clicked their heels together with a fine flourish.

Loewenkeller doesn't live there any more. Manager Guy Scott has gone into a huddle with Architects Daniels Brothers, and they're going to do a lot of face lifting. They hint of trips to South America for atmosphere, a new name, new band, staff and equipment.

Three weeks seems almost too long to wait. They hope to set the opening night before Hallowe'en.

Rugs for Sweet Music.

Carpets are being laid at the Mayflower. Acoustical authorities say the rugs make Sidney's music sweeter. The music is never too loud.

Teddy, the headwaiter, is a master of graciousness. Teddy knows where the coziest tables are, and he can tell if you look as if you needed one.

Always diverting is Sid Cowen, who sings about that man who flew on the trapeze, or the dark-eyed gypsy, or the young lady known as "Estrellita."

This Southern accent is getting a grip on Washington. Everybody who goes to the Lotus comes away saying "you-all" and "sho-nuff," then goes right back to the Lotus to see the show again.

Reason: Al Horton has come across with one of his skits, and the Capitolians are confirmed Southerners. As you may have guessed, the song is "Pardon My Southern Accent."

The rest of the show includes Dorothy and Gilbert doing their original "Rumbolero," which sounds like a combination of this and that; Bobby De Fay who sings and dances, Corbitt and Triano, eccentric and tap dancers; Christie Napier, more songs, some of them, light opera.

Little Lady With Appeal.

More "Southern accent." Little Marie Fowler at La Paree has an appealing way of putting it over. Another little lady there is Janet Arnold, who steps from the line of the chorus to a skipping rope dance. She says she used to skip around the block when she was a little girl, and liked it so much that she combined it with her dancing. It took her only two weeks to work out this rather strenuous number.

Here is the rest of the bill: Billie Rogers, who does a modernistic dance and a rhumba; Luis and Pegi, with a new tango among other things, and the master of ceremonies giving an imitation of Pat Rooney giving an imitation of a clog dance.

Two newcomes at Club Michel—Helen Shaw, whose songs are very blue, and Roberta Janey, whose dances are eccentric and modernistic.

Rest in Pine Room.

The Lafayette's Pine Room is a lovely, restful retreat for those who are most comfortable in early American surroundings. For a new room, it has a delightful antique finish, and the reason is obvious: They made it that way on purpose. The furniture looks a bit timeworn, the mantel place has the rough appearance that comes with years of use.

You'll like it. It's charming.

Child's Gingham Club will be going Mexican, we're told. And it won't be called the Gingham Club when the decorating is finished.

If you want to dine at the Madrillon on Thursdays it's a good idea to call up ahead of time for reservations. Thursday is usually a big evening, a special dinner is served and it is also your cook's day off.

'Faked' Holdup Holds Pair for Grand Jury

An allegedly "faked" holdup held two youths for grand jury action in Police Court yesterday. Horton C. Callahan, 19, and John Carroll, 20, both employes of the High Ice Cream Co., pleaded guilty to "framing" the robbery and were held under bonds of $1,000 each.

Callahan was found early Monday bound and gagged in the company's plant. He said he had been robbed of more than $100. After questioning, however, he led police to the home of Carroll, where, it was reported, the money was found.

City Sewer Street Contracts Given

Four Projects Awarded by Commissioners.

Four sewer and street improvement contracts were awarded yesterday by the District Commissioners to lowest bidders.

The Warren F. Brenizer Co., of Washington, was awarded three sewer contracts. One was for construction of a sanitary sewer in Powhatan place northwest, between Fifth and Sixth streets, at a cost of $1,943.25. Another was for construction of the Murdock Valley sanitary sewer in Forty-ninth street northwest, between Upton and Tilden streets, at a cost of $2,593.57, and the third was for construction of a replacement sewer in South Carolina avenue southeast, between Third and Fourth streets, at a cost of $1,807.84.

Contract for improvement of the roadway of Broad Branch road northwest, from Nevada avenue to Rock Creek Park, was awarded to the McGuire & Rolfe Co., of Washington, at a cost of $36,960.15.

Girl Pleads Guilty To Two Forgeries

Mother Pressed Charge; Sentencing Deferred.

Indicted Monday on a charge of forging her mother's name to two checks totaling $33.50, Miss Mary F. Sawyer, 22, yesterday entered a plea of guilty before Justice James M. Proctor, in the District Supreme Court.

Because of her previous good record, Justice Proctor deferred sentence until the probation officer has an opportunity to investigate the circumstances of the cases. One of the forgeries involved a check given in payment for liquor, and the other was used to purchase clothing. Mrs. Jane C. Sawyer, the mother, appeared before the grand jury and testified against her daughter.

'Airing' of Traffic Violations Helps, Safety Congress Told

Cleveland, Oct. 2 (AP).—Radio broadcasts of traffic court hearings are dreaded by violators and teach a lesson in caution to listeners, Judge William H. Sheaffer of the Indianapolis Municipal Court told the National Safety Congress today.

Describing the broadcasts from his courtroom, the judge said he has found the procedure more effective in "spanking" thoughtless motorists than any other.

"Erring motorists dreaded the laughs and taunts of their listening friends," he said. "They realized their excuses sounded mighty slim over the air, and this, added to their fines, left a vivid impression on them.

"A lesson in caution also is taught the listener. The knowledge that John Doe paid $15 for speeding naturally has its effect on a heavy-footed driver, and hearing how another ran by a stop light and nearly caused an accident also has its effect."

Judge Sheaffer said that "nothing so important as our court systems should be kept behind closed doors and covered with mystery." He declared the courtroom broadcast is a weekly reminder in Indianapolis of the necessity for safe and sane driving.

The committee on public education recommended to the congress that every new driver should receive definite instruction and training before attempting to operate a motor vehicle on public highways, holding that "to expose a beginning driver to modern city traffic is positively suicidal or homicidal."

11 Million Rail Loans Are Approved by I.C.C.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has approved loans by the Reconstruction Corporation of $6,000,000 to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co. and $7,357,000 to the Chicago & Northwestern Railway.

The New Haven loan is to be used to help meet obligations in October, November and December. The loan to the Northwestern was conditioned upon the road paying, extending or refinancing for two years $5,000,000 owed to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., of New York.

CCC Chaplain Resigns; Refused to Go to Dance

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 2 (AP).—The Rev. Theo Shepard, 30, has resigned as chaplain of the CCC camp at Fort Crook, near here.

His resignation from the Officers Reserve Corps, under which he held the post of chaplain, followed the insistence of his commanding officer that he attend a dance, Mr. Shepard said today, after he had told the officer his conscience would not let him attend.

Imposing List of New Season Attractions Is Announced for National Theater

Bookings Made Into December Without Hiatus

Premieres Are Included; Fine Pictures Coming; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

There need be no further fear and trepidation with regard to the quality and the quantity of the theatrical fare to be afforded playgoers of the National Capital during the season that is scheduled to open in the National Theater next Monday night.

Mr. Stephen E. Cochran, panjandrum of the National, has broken down and told all. From his cheerful disclosures one surmises, optimistically, that the outlook is unusually bright for this time of year; booking are not few and far between, but, on the contrary, are plentiful and, at the moment, on the sheets in an unbroken succession of attractive bills, so that, altogether, it seems safe to look forward to a season rich in variety, distinguished in its roster of stars and alive with new enterprises and productions.

Although, for good and sufficient reasons, Panjandrum Cochran has avoided any stentorian preseason to-do concerning the rosy hue of his Thespic tabernacle's outlook upon the months that lie ahead, if properly wheedled he will confide that his theater is already booked solid through the week of December 2.

Nine Are Ready.

That is to say, nine dramatic, musical and repertoire offerings await the tolling off of the weeks beginning October 8. These bookings, always subject to change at this early point in the season, when the unexpected is more apt than not to alter plans which seem secure, are as follows:

October 8—"The Farmer Takes a Wife," Max Gordon's production of a new play by Frank B. Elser and Marc Connelly, with June Walker and Herb Williams in the featured roles, to be given its premiere here.

October 15—Fred Stone, with his daughter, Carol, in "The Jayhawker," a new play by Sinclair Lewis and Lloyd Lewis, dealing with events before, during and immediately following the War between the States.

October 22—"Bring on the Girls," Sam H. Harris' production of a new musical satire on the New Deal by George S. Kaufman, Morrie Ryskind and Moss Hart, to be given its premiere here with Jack Benny prominent in the proceedings.

October 29—"Roberta," Max Gordon's musical hit of last season, with Tamara Geva, Fay Templeton and the original Broadway cast.

A Parade of the Great.

November 5—Eva Le Gallienne and Ethel Barrymore in Miss Le Gallienne's production of "L'Aiglon," a revised version of the play in which both Bernhardt and Maud Adams appeared with signal sucess many seasons ago.

November 12—The Theater Guild's production of "Valley Forge," the new drama by Maxwell Anderson, author of last season's "Mary of Scotland" and a Pulitzer prize winner the season before with "Both Your Houses," based on the life and Revolutionary career of George Washington.

November 19—"Ah, Wilderness," Eugene O'Neill's retrospective drama of adolescence, with George M. Cohan in the stellar role of the father.

November 26 (Thanksgiving week)—Walter Hampden in a repertoire of classic dramas, the precise identities of which have not been announced.

December 2 — "As Thousands Cheer," the sensational musical satire that fell only a fortnight short of a full year's run at the Music Box Theater in New York last season, with the Broadway cast intact, except that Dorothy Stone now appears in the role created by Marilyn Miller.

After Xmas Holidays.

The only booking as yet definitely known to follow the holidays at the National is Cornelia Otis Skinner in a repertoire of her ingenious solo sequences and short sketches.

In addition to these specific attractions, the season also is expected to produce its full quota of "Dodsworths," Katharine Cornells, "Men in Whites" and the like—with probably a dash of Savoyard and grand opera now and again. Then, too, there are the subscription plays of the American Theater Society of Washington, for which the books are now open. So now you know.

Speaking of "The Jayhawker," as we were back there opposite date as of October 15, Walter C. Kelly, famous as "The Virginia Judge" of the varieties and musical comedy and revue stage, has been added to the cast supporting Fred Stone, according to advices received late yesterday. Mr. Kelly will be featured in the billing and share top honors with the star—which is to say that he will have quite a part. "The Virginia Judge" is entitled to quite a part, because ever and above being an A-1 comedian and incomparable raconteur he is a versatile and an able actor, as was demonstrated by his participation in "Both Your Houses," the Maxwell Anderson Pulitzer prize winner of season before last.

Two More Previews.

Exciting as the outlook is to the theater's faithful, it should not be overlooked that screen entertainment of unusual quality continues to form a conspicuous part of the Capital's potential pastime.

In "One Night of Love" and "Outcast Lady," the dramatic desks have been favored with anticipatory previews of two exceptionally well-made and interesting pictures since the screening of Cecil B. DeMille's "Cleopatra" last Saturday morning.

"One Night of Love," in which Grace Moore and Tullio Carminati will be seen on the Earle screen beginning Friday, emphasizes once again that Columbia Pictures may be relied upon to turn out an infallible box-office winner at almost regular intervals—as witness "Lady for a Day," "It Happened One Night," "Twentieth Century" and others of like ilk. It finally fulfills the false promise made almost eight years ago by the audible screen to bring into the picture theaters a quality of music at least remotely comparable to that which the house orchestras used to supply in the old silent days.

Makes Sane Use of Music.

With Grace Moore's magnificent voice and great personal charm as the focal point of its interest and preeminence, "One Night of Love"—which is an almost perfect misnomer—makes superb use of some of the most popular excerpts from grand opera, weaving them intelligently and effectively into a story that would not be complete or wholly understandable without them.

This story, by the way, allowing for a few modernizations, twists and deviations, is not too far removed from "Trilby." It is the familiar tale of the prima donna who can only do her best work and achieve the pinnacle of her art when under the sustaining hand of her guide, mentor and lover, who has brought her from obscurity to fame, fortune and the Metropolitan.

While "One Night of Love" probably has been considerably overpraised since it exploded as such a staggering surprise upon its first release, it may confidently be relied upon to furnish the most glorious hour or so of music that has ever flooded an auditorium from a motion picture screen. It needed only a story of a little more profound impressiveness to make it as truly great as the musical masterpieces it employs to prove that genuine grand opera is not inimical to the cinema.

A New "Green Hat."

"Outcast Lady," which, as everyone knows by now, is the new audible adaptation of Michael Arlen's novel of "The Green Hat," is a film of an entirely different order, but no less distinguished in its artistry.

The new version of the story of Iris March, her profligate and neurotic brother, Napier and the rest is, at times, drawn out to a degree that somewhat vitiates its dramatic forcefulness, but it nevertheless will be found by patrons of Loew's Fox, beginning Friday, to present Constance Bennett in perhaps as memorable a vehicle as she ever has had.

"Outcast Lady" is not an enlivening picture, being heavily weighted with the leaden palls of disappointment, disaster and violent death, but it is one that has been made with such obviously painstaking care, equipped with so fine a band of actors and unfolded with such minute attention to detail that it takes on an aura of artistic importance beyond the desserts of the crass and sordid theme upon which Michael Arlen did so smart a piece of writing.

Story Not Denatured.

The story of "The Green Hat" has not been sufficiently denatured here to destroy its original tang or cause those who enjoyed the silent version to shy away in fear of a tremendous letting down. "Outcast Lady" holds its own, even in a season of extraordinarily worthy releases.

Cinemaddicts, as a matter of fact, will wait a long week before they will encounter another line-up of pictures such as "Cleopatra," "One Night of Love," "Outcast Lady," "The Richest Girl in the World," "Wake Up and Dream" and the rest that will be on view here next week. Weeks like that are few and far between.

During her New York season, which will begin in the Martin Beck Theater on Thursday night, December 20, with "Romeo and Juliet," Katharine Cornell, in association with Guthrie McClintic, will present "Flowers of the Forest," a new modern drama by John van Druten. As is the custom with all Van Druten plays, Auriol Lee will direct the production, which, as is the case with all Miss Cornell's theatrical enterprises, will be under the supervision of Mr. McClintic.

Eternal Unities Note.

Odd coincidence, begging your pardon, Mr. Povich, that both Joe Cronin and Bill Terry, who were fighting it out in the World Series a year ago should have finished second this season—Mr. Terry second from the top; Mr. Cronin second from the top, Chinese fashion!

No, Mr. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the Nationals' theme song this year is not Master Bill McCormick's captivating chansonette, "Down on the Farm," but that infinitely more plaintive lament, "Cronin Low!"

Film Table

Screen and stage bills will be presented on the following schedules at the theaters named:

Earle—"Belle of the Nineties," at 10:05 a. m., 12:25, 2:55, 5:20, 7:55 and 10:20 p. m. Stage shows at 11:30 a. m., 1:55, 4:20, 7 and 9:25.

Loew's Fox—"Charlie Chan in London," at 10:50 a. m., 1:35, 4:20, 7:05 and 9:50 p. m. Stage shows, with Ben Bernie, at 1, 3:45, 6:30 and 9:15 p. m.

Columbia—"She Was a Lady," at 11:55 a. m., 1:50, 3:50, 5:45, 7:45 and 9:45 p. m.

Rialto—"The Human Side," at 11:20 a. m., 1:05, 2:55, 4:40, 6:25, 8:10 and 9:55 p. m.

Palace—"Barretts of Wimpole Street," at 11:50 a. m., 2:15, 4:45, 7:10 and 9:40 p. m.

Metropolitan—"Dames," at 11:10 a. m., 1:15, 3:20, 5:20, 7:25 and 9:25 p. m.

RKO-Keith's—"The Count of Monte Cristo," at 11 a. m., 1:08, 3:19, 5:24, 7:32 and 9:40 p. m.

Tivoli—"British Agent," at 2:25, 4:10, 6, 7:45 and 9:35 p. m.

Ambassador—"Treasure Island," at 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30 p. m.

The Great Lovers of the Nile

Here we have the central characters in Cecil B. DeMille's Gargantuan spectacle, "Cleopatra," as colorful and colossal—this really is the spot to use these overworked words—a bit of screen pageantry as the season will afford. They are, of course, Cleopatra and Marc Antony, in the persons of the delectable Miss Claudette Colbert and the stalwart Henry Wilcoxon, imported for this especial assignment. Their performances, let it be known, are not seriously dwarfed by the magnitude and magnificence of their surroundings.

Straight From the Studios

Competition Is Warm for Lead in "Anthony Adverse;" Dieterle Again Is Associated With Reinhardt; a New Grist of Hollywood Jottings.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Oct. 2.—Behold! Another entrant for the role of Anthony Adverse. Deciding upon a star for the picturization of this huge volume is assuming the proportions of a contest. Francis Lederer is the latest, it appearing that his fan club in England has proposed the gifted Czechoslovakian actor, whose fame hereabouts rests as much upon his stage interpretation of "Autumn Crocus" as upon his one lone generally released picture, "Man of Two Worlds."

GEORGE BRENT

Morgan To Go Home.

Apparently reported differences between Frank Morgan and M-G-M studio are being ironed out and he will go back to work for the studio that has been loaning him out for three or four pictures. Morgan is slated for the featured role of the Governor of Louisiana in "Naughty Marietta," in which Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy have the leads.

Aline Sympathetic From Now On.

Playing sympathetic characters from now on probably will be Aline MacMahon's sovereign duty. She has won steady favor ever since first appearing in "Once in a Lifetime," in which she made a hard-boiled beginning. Warners have taken up the option on her contract and she is expected back from New York soon to start work in "While the Patient Slept." She will play a nurse who solves a murder mystery.

Dieterle recently has directed such pictures as "Madame DuBarry," "Fashion Follies of 1934," and "The Firebird," and is now guiding Barbara Stanwyck and Warren William in "Concealment." Dieterle was identified with Reinhardt productions abroad for some years.

10,000 to See Pageant Here Friday Night

'Self-Help' Was Written by Former Hollywood Scenarist.

Written by a former Hollywood scenarist, with a prologue and epilogue composed by a relief worker and featuring a chorus of 1,000 voices, "Self Help" will be presented on the east steps of the Capitol Friday night before a crowd expected to exceed 10,000.

Plans for the pageant, one of the largest undertakings of its kind ever attempted in Washington, were announced yesterday by Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, director. Approximately 3,000 dancers, singers and actors will participate.

Intended to demonstrate how Americans can hasten the return of prosperity by their own concerted efforts, "Self Help" was written by Harry M. Gardener, who holds an humble job in the District Emergency Relief administration. A few years ago, as a scenario writer for Mack Sennett comedies and other films, he drew an annual salary running into five figures.

Only $25 for Expenses.

Lewis Alexander, author of the prologue and epilogue, is a graduate of Howard University. A prize winner in a recent National contest for Negro poets, he now holds a menial job obtained for him by the District relief office.

In spite of the mammoth scale on which the pageant will be produced, only $25 is available for expenses. Costumes, properties, services of performers, publicity and practically every other necessity are being contributed free.

It will be staged under sponsorship of the Self Help Cooperatives of the Emergency Relief Administration, assisted by the Community Center department and the recreation department of the Transient Bureau. Mrs. Forrest, the director, is head of the Community Center department's pageantry and drama division.

The venture has enlisted the aid of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, office of National Capital Parks, the Architect of the Capitol, Vice President Garner, U. S. Marine Band, Civilian Conservation Corps, District Playground department, Greater National Capital committee, District Commissioners and the Board of Education. Mrs Roosevelt is one of the sponsors.

Johnson to Conduct Chorus.

In nine scenes, which span the years between 1621 and today, "Self Help" will show the Marian Chace Dancers, Community Center dramatic clubs, Donna Taggart dramatic group, Estelle Wentworth operatic group and numerous other entertainment units representing the Civilian Conservation Corps, Girl Scouts, churches, Transient Bureau and Henry W. Spangler Post, American Legion.

Alfred Johnson, director of music in the colored public schools, has been assigned to conduct the mixed chorus of 1,000 voices. He will be assisted by Mrs. Gabrielle C. Pelham.

Charles J. McCubbin is assisting Mrs. Forrest in the general direction. The pageant will begin at 7:30 p. m.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

As several hundred Federal employes gathered last night at a mass meeting at the Thomson Community Center, protesting the impending dismissal of 1,800 Internal Revenue employes under the McKellar rider to the emergency appropriation act, word was received that the American Federation of Labor was preparing a formal protest on the ouster.

BAKER

The A. F. of L. is expected to adopt the resolution opposing the dismissal of the former prohibition unit workers who have been transferred to Treasury. This resolution, along with many others covering the entire program of the American Federation of Government Employes (an A. F. of L. unit), is being presented by E. Claude Babcock, A. F. G. E. president, who is now in San Francisco attending the convention.

The A. F. G. E. already has suggested two courses which it believes practicable for the relief of the 1,800 or more civil service employes affected by the McKellar rider.

First, the A. F. G. E. contends that the original intent of the sponsors of the legislation was to reach only a small group of employes, specifically prohibition agents, and that the other employes should not have been affected. The federation has urged that the matter be referred once more to Attorney General Cummings for a new interpretation in the light of these circumstances.

Second, the AFGE believes that it would be legal to furlough the employes, indefinitely, in order to give Congress an opportunity to reconsider this legislation.

The imperiled employes emphasize the fact that the rider was pushed through on the last day of the session, and few members had the opportunity to examine it.

Dr. Samuel F. Hildebrand, senior ichthyologist, and Miss Louella E. Cable (*), formerly aquatic biologist, Bureau of Fisheries, have just had published by Commerce a bulletin describing the "Reproduction and Development of Whitings or Kingfishes, Drums, Spot, Croaker and Weakfishes or Sea Trouts Family Sciaenidae, of the Atlantic Coast of the United States." The 44 drawings of fishes reproduced in the report were made by Miss Cable.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE scientists have tracked down another suspicious insect and convicted it of spreading Stewart's disease, a costly malady of sweet corn. The scientists are Dr. Charlotte Elliott, associate pathologist of the Bureau of Plant Industry, and Dr. F. W. Poos, senior entomologist of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine. The insect is a tiny flea beetle.

Plant pathologists of the department some time ago identified the organism that causes the disease, but they were unable to determine how it lived over the winter. Planting only seed from uninfected corn proved no safeguard against the appearance of wilt in a field. Further experiments also failed to show that the soil carried the bacteria through the winter. These investigators did find that a tiny flea beetle with a long name—Chaetocnema pulicaria melsheimer—could carry the disease from one plant to another.

Not until this fall, however, was it proved that this flea beetle carries the bacteria through the winter. Much remains to be learned about the habits of the flea beetle, Dr. Poos says.

Two Government employes formerly located here were honored Sunday at a tea at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Zeitler in Chevy Chase. The guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Irey who left Washington yesterday for Oklahoma City, where Mr. Irey has been appointed agent in charge, Investigative Division, Interior. Mrs. Irey was for a number of years assistant head of the Information Division, Internal Revenue.

Extensive Social Season.

Another brilliant and extensive social season is in store for members of the National Federation of Federal Employes and their friends here, local NFFE officials declared yesterday in announcing the dance to be given by all the branches of

Other unions of the NFFE in the District will follow with other dances and functions once the annual "curtain raiser" of Washington's oldest and largest Federal Employes Union has led the way. Nothing has been spared in order to usher in the NFFE social program in proper style, according to William P. Walsh, chairman of the dance committee.

Mr. Walsh, a General Accounting Office employe, is chairman of the entertainment committee of Local, No. 2. He will be assisted by three leading "No. 2" members of the Commerce Department and Veterans' Administration branches, who conducted a highly enjoyable and successful joint dance of their units to close the program in the spring. They are Robert W. Newland and Harold W. Keenan, Foreign and Domestic Commerce Bureau, who will head the ticket and floor subcommittees, and Henry G. Nolda (*) Veterans' Administration, who will direct publicity.

These members of the general committee have secured an orchestra that is an old Washington favorite, the splendid McWilliams Orchestra. They promise other features to be announced, including probably entertainment from the Musical and Dramatic Guild of the Department of Agriculture.

Each of the 18 branches of Local, No. 2, maintained in as many departments and agencies of the Federal Government, also will appoint cooperating committees, which will be named at current meetings of those organizations.

A net loss of 15 on the Civil Service reemployment register for the past week is reported by Civil Service Commission. Names of 30 persons were added to the list and 45 were removed. Total number remaining is 641, of which 197 are listed as serving in temporary positions.

Six Hundred Per Block.

Half an inch, half an inch, half an inch onward,
Stormed at from every side,
Held by the crossing tide,
They vainly try to ride, harried six hundred.

Oh, the wild drive they make, clutching at wheel and brake,
Feet, arms and head all ache, lest some one blunder;
Who says they are not brave,
And though pedestrians rave,

Traffic to right of them, traffic to left of them,
Traffic behind them, pounded and thundered;
Those who survive once more,
Crawl out at half-past four,

Dodge Fete Here to Echo Colonial Era

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Golden Jubilee celebrations are always interesting, and the testimonial dinner to be given at the Mayflower on October 20, in honor of Col. Harrison H. Dodge, marking the fiftieth anniversary of his services as superintendent of Mount Vernon, will be a very novel entertainment.

A group of distinguished guests has been invited to the banquet, among them the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and it is hoped that they will be able to attend the tribute to a man whose life work has been the preservation of George Washington's home.

The Minister of Albania, Mr. Faik Konitza, will be present as will the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. R. Walton Moore; Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Grosvenor, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mr. Henry P. Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Needham C. Turnage, Dr. and Mrs. George F. Bowerman, the Rev. C. A. Langston, of Pohick Church, where Gen. Washington was a frequent worshipper; Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, Mr. George A. Ewing, Mr. John C. Fitzgerald, Mr. John K. M. Ewing, Mrs. Charles Alden, Dr. Thomas E. Green, Mr. Alfred C. Clark and Miss Elizabeth G. Clark.

Others to Attend.

Mrs. Harriet R. Davis, who was a bridesmaid at the wedding of Col. and Mrs. Dodge; Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's Church, and Mrs. Hart, and the assistant rector, Mr. James Madison, also will attend. Others there will be Mr. Leon A. Shearer, formerly assistant rector of St. John's Church; Mrs. Dorothy Winchote, Dr. Edith de Villa Cole, Mr. and Mrs. F. Regis Noel and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Young.

When the Colonial Exposition was opened in Paris some three years ago, Col. Dodge was commissioned to make the trip to France to inspect the American exhibit, a reproduction of Mount Vernon, in Vincennes Park. Being one of the greatest authorities on Mount Vernon, Col. Dodge was asked to make a close study of the reproduction and make a report on any parts which were not authentically reproduced. In the splendid building at the exposition, Col. Dodge found only a few minor details which he thought should be corrected, and at his suggestion they were made right.

Decorated by France.

Two years ago Col. Dodge, with others who had served in Paris at the exposition, was decorated by the French government with the Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, the French Ambassador, M. Paul Claudel, who is now representing his country in Brussels, making the presentation for his government.

The dinner will follow as far as possible, in manner and menu, a dinner given in the days of George Washington, and although the setting will be the modern ballroom of the Mayflower, old-time service will be used and the courses will follow those served at Mount Vernon in 1789.

The long banquet table will be set with colonial china, and whole hams and turkeys will grace the snowy damask of the banquet cloth. Those who serve will be dressed as Mount Vernon retainers, and will add characteristic color to the scene. There will be no frozen desserts, but puddings, custards and jellies will appear in great abundance and variety.

Approximately 40 members of the Puerto Rican colony in Washington are expected to attend. Mr. A. D. Whiteside, member of the newly created NRA board, is at the Shoreham from New York City.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR Diary:

How is a mere mortal to keep up with all of the things that are taking place?

Yesterday morning I pleasantly and unexpectedly ran into Mary Katharine Spinks and her mother, M. K. (who was attired in mustard tweed with brown accessories) was all excited and busy because she has at last decided to make her debut this year. Hers is to be a bit different. Instead of a tea dance or ball she is to have a large luncheon on November 9, which will serve two purposes; first, the formal bow to society, and, second (but not least by any means), her birthday. I wonder what color the candles on the cake will be?

That most recent of popular songs—"Pardon My Southern Accent"—has been sung, and sincerely, too, by many people—but the other evening the rightful singer sang it. Young Napoleon Bonaparte Jones (and that's his real name), from North Carolina (who doesn't speak Bostonese and who also has a very nice voice), sang the air, and was it good and did we like it?

Katherine Pearson, who has been sunning at Bayhead, has finally returned to town and will officially make her reappearance this evening when half a hundred of our contemporaries will gather to dine and dance at the Old Barn.

De Laboulayes Return Today From Vacation

French Ambassador and Family Spent Summer Abroad.

The Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye will arrive in New York today aboard the Paris and will be met by the Counselor of the Embassy, M. Jules Henry. They will come immediately to Washington, accompanied by their two young daughters, Mlle. Marie Therese and Mlle. Agnes de Laboulaye, who have been with their parents in France during the summer.

Plans for the entertainment of the captain and officers of the French destroyer d'Entrecasteaux, which will be at the Washington Navy Yard this week, have not been definitely made, pending the return of the ambassador.

However, the Naval Attache of the Embassy and Mme. Sable have issued cards for an at home in honor of the officers tomorrow from 5 to 7 p. m. at their home, 12 Primrose street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Miss H. L. Doherty Visits Washington

Returned From Greenland With Mrs. Owen.

Miss Helen Lee Doherty has arrived at the Shoreham for an extended stay, after returning to this country recently with the United States Minister to Denmark, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, following a two months' visit in Greenland.

Miss Doherty, who has been Mrs. Owen's secretary at the legation in Copenhagen, will be in America until after Christmas. She will spend some time with her parents, Col. and Mrs. Henry L. Doherty, in Florida.

Miss Doherty has as her guest at the Shoreham Mrs. Falbe-Hansen, of Copenhagen, who will spend several months in this country. Mrs. Falbe-Hansen's itinerary will include a trip to Detroit to see her son, Mr. Allen Falbe-Hansen.

Sallie Weller Will Be Bride Of Mr. Curtin

Had Planned to Make Her Debut This Winter; Weds This Month.

Mrs. Francis R. Weller has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Sallie Rita Weller, to Mr. William A. Curtin, jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. William A. Curtin, of Syracuse and Lake Placid, N. Y.

Miss Weller, who had planned to make her debut this winter, is the daughter of the late Mr. Francis R. Weller, well known consulting engineer of Washington, and is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Weller, of Washington, and the late Mr. and Mrs. George Hester Harlow, of Alexandria, Va. The young bride-elect attended the Convent of the Sacred Heart and Georgetown Visitation Convent.

Mr. Curtin is a member of one of the oldest families of Syracuse, having as his grandparents the late Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Curtin and the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter V. O'Malley. Mr. Curtin, who received his early education in Syracuse, is a graduate of Georgetown University.

The wedding will take place some time this month.

Debutantes' Fete Is Set for Oct. 20

This season's debutantes are the guests of honor at this function, which is given by the debutantes of other years, or "the girls on the shelf," as they call themselves. October 20 is the date for this season's dance and the garden of the hotel has again been chosen for the affair.

Those attending are being asked to represent as near as possible some of the well known motion picture stars and prizes will be awarded for the most clever and unusual costumes.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown Arrive at Capital

Mr. and Mrs. Wrisley Brown and their daughter, Miss Katherine Brown, have arrived at the Shoreham after several days in New York, where Mrs. Brown and her daughter had joined Mr. Brown after several weeks at the Ritz-Carlton in Atlantic City. They expect to divide the autumn months between the Shoreham and their country place, Hollow Tree, at Sandy Spring, Md.

Miss Brown will be one of the season's debutantes and the date of her debut probably will be announced in a few days.

Plan Proposes Little Theater In Every Home

Mrs. Hobbs Would Make All Children of 9 Amateur Actors.

In the midst of presiding over the "drama booth" at the twentieth congress of the association and answering questions of delegates gathered in the Wardman Park Hotel, Mrs. Hobbs found time yesterday to outline her plan for making every mother a director of plays and every child of 9 an amateur actor.

"Every single person has had a longing to act at some time in his life," said the drama consultant. "But often the chance to join a little theater or to take part in a church program doesn't come until the person has reached the age when it is hard for him to let himself go. He is self-conscious and awkward the minute he steps on the most humble stage. But if he has had an opportunity to take part in plays when 9 years old he is perfectly at home before an audience in later years."

The directing and training of 9-year-old thespians can very well be done within the home, according to Mrs. Hobbs.

Basements Attractive Theaters.

"And the mothers will get as much out of it as the children," she declared. "Remember when all youngsters used to 'play show' in the attic? They loved it and so did their parents, because it kept them out of mischief. Well, there aren't very many attics today and the children have drifted to other less worth-while amusements. It's up to the mothers to teach them again the delights of play-acting. Basements make just as attractive theaters as attics did."

In homes without basements a part of the living room can serve as a stage when the little troopers are ready to give a performance, Mrs. Hobbs explained.

"I can just see the wry expressions on many women's faces at the idea of their orderly houses being turned into settings for 'Treasure Island' or 'Rip Van Winkle,'" she laughed. "And yet those same women will endure their small daughters' agonizing piano practice; they will put up with their sons' modeling in clay because they want their children to be accomplished when they grow up. Well, it's just as important for the children to grow up with poise and self-confidence. There's nothing better than acting for accomplishing those two things."

Audiences Unimportant.

Audiences are unimportant as far as the children are concerned, Mrs. Hobbs has learned.

"The play's the thing with them. They don't care whether anybody is watching or not. And they take direction better than grown-ups. That's why a mother can soon learn to produce shows with her own children and their little playmates. She'll find the youngsters take as much interest in making costumes and scenery as in portraying villians and heroines."

While amateur acting is fine, amateur playwrighting is usually pretty bad, in the opinion of Mrs. Hobbs.

"The mothers—even those with a flair for writing—will get better results if they produce plays by authors who really know the theater," she said. "But more important than the play is the age at which the children begin. Nine is ideal because at that time mighty few boys and girls have become self-conscious. They're natural little actors then.

Mrs. James Wolfe To Speak in South

Democratic Leader Will Address Two Meetings.

Mrs. James H. Wolfe, director of the women's division, Democratic National Committee, left yesterday for a brief speaking tour through Georgia and South Carolina to add the final spark to a series of organization and educational programs now in the making.

Mrs. Wolfe has been urged by women's organizations to assist in putting the reporter plan into effect, and to explain numerous phases of New Deal legislation. She has been especially requested to talk on the President's Social Insurance program, and the Federal Housing Act.

To save time and to facilitate Mrs. Wolfe's program, Mrs. J. A. Rollison, of Waycross, president of the Federated Clubs of Georgia, has called a State meeting of combined women's Democratic groups for today at Macon. The day will be given over to conferences with leaders, climaxed by an assembly at which Mrs. Wolfe will be principal speaker. A similar program will be followed in South Carolina with a State meeting scheduled at Columbia for tomorrow. Mrs. Wolfe expects to return here Friday.

Mrs. Baldwin Entertains For Mrs. Wintringham

Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, vice president of the National League of Women Voters, entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home in honor of Mrs. Margaret Wintringham, the first woman member of the British Parliament. Among the guests were Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, and Miss Josephine Kelett, of London.

This was the second occasion on which league officers have honored Mrs. Wintringham. She was their guest at dinner on her previous American visit more than a year ago. Mrs. Wintringham is leaving Washington Thursday to continue her extended tour of the United States and Canada.

Catholic Leader Tells Of Gains in England

By Elizabeth Young.

THE ANGLO-SAXON of today brings a paradoxical mind to religion. He is at once more pagan and more receptive to Christian doctrinal teaching than ever before.

And the centuries-old phenomena of hostility to the Roman Catholic Church in England has, since the World War, been gradually dissolving into a friendly interest in, and frequent acceptance of, the church's creed.

This view of the English mental scene is brought to America by Mrs. Maisie Ward Sheed, long-time chairman of the speakers' training committee of England's Catholic Evidence Guild, which promotes outdoors exposition of Catholic tenets.

In Washington to speak at the international luncheon which featured Tuesday's sessions of the National Council of Catholic Women's fourteenth annual convention, meeting at the Mayflower Hotel this week, Mrs. Sheed was interviewed in her room at the Grafton Hotel preceding the luncheon.

"What am I going to talk about?" she repeated the question with swift Oxonian inflection. "'The Catholic Church in the Modern World,' I believe it's finally been decided; so many suggestions have been offered, I've scarcely known 'till just now.

Parents Noted Writers.

"Tell you something about myself? My father and mother are really the most important things about me!

"My father was Wilfred Ward, biographer of Cardinal Newman and for ten years editor of the Dublin Review; and he in turn was the son of 'Ideal' Ward—you've heard of him?—that William George Ward whose book 'The Ideal of a Christian Church' more or less started the Oxford Movement of the Anglican Church toward Catholicism a hundred years ago.

"My mother wrote a lot of novels, many of them well known in America. Her last one, written and published in the States just before she died two years ago, called 'Tudor Sunset,' is perhaps best known over here.

"I'm doing a book now, too, 'The Wilfrid Wards and the Transition.' It's going to be frightfully interesting——" she slurred the vowels in inimitable British fashion; "—— they left such interesting material. It's partly my father's reminiscences; partly his letters—he carried on an enormous correspondence with all sorts of important people of the Victorian Age: his friends included Tennyson, Huxley, Lord Balfour. He started the Synthetic Society with Lord Balfour, you know, to promote philosophical discussion.

Lived in Age of Changes.

"All of them lived in a period of such extraordinary changes: social, political, and particularly in the religious world.

"The religious changes started with my grandfather's book, for which he was deprived of his degrees at Oxford, and forced to resign his lectureships. He wrote, you know, that the Church of England ought to turn to the Church of Rome and humbly sue for restoration. But it was soon realized there was no room for Catholicism in the Anglican Church, and the greater number of such advocates became Catholics.

"My mother's father, James Hope Scott, a parliamentary barrister, joined with the movement a little later. He was a great friend of Cardinal Manning's, and a tremendous friend of Gladstone's. He always hoped to bring him into the Church.

"Now, about the Catholic Evidence Guild. It's a society, formed immediately after the war, for explaining the Catholic religion out of doors in parks and public places. It was started by a group of lay persons in Hyde Park, where there are now speakers every night and on Sundays, continual speaking from 2 in the afternoon until 10 in the evening. I suppose there are as many as 40 meetings a week in different places in London, and about 100 meetings a week throughout England.

"My husband started the movement in Sydney, Australia, after he had been master in the London Guild. That's where I met my husband, by the way. I was training speakers and he joined my squad. Very soon he knew much more than I. Oh, it's a well known fact; everybody recognized it——" she waves aside any suggestion of gallantry in her concession.

Capital Guild Praised.

"Washington and Baltimore have two first-rate Catholic Evidence Guilds, as fine as any in England," she said. "I spoke in Baltimore last week-end, in Hollins Market Saturday evening and in some park Sunday afternoon. I talked about St. John Bosco, founder of the Silesians; the Catholic ideal of marriage, and Matt Talbot, the Irish dock laborer.

"What the crowd loves, really, is a discussion of profound doctrine, such as the supernatural life. It also likes enormously talks on the lives of the saints.

"But every speaker's got to do the subject he does best. Now, I could never talk about the existence of God and the immortal soul. I confine myself to the exposition of certain doctrines. My husband gives lots of philosophy. The speakers' list includes all sorts of persons, a few university men—we've even got a scrubwoman! Oh, but she's splendid. She's really studied; she's read St. Thomas Aquinas.

"And with everyone the work's entirely voluntary; a spare time job. Nobody's paid a penny. It's all done principally to instruct non-Catholics in the faith; and gradually to give more and more knowledge of Catholicism. Some few become Catholics; and others just get more Christianity in their system!

"And it's all brought about a pronounced difference in the non-Catholic's attitude toward the Church. Where they were once very hostile, they're now far more receptive. It's mainly on account of us hammering away; and partly because of their disappointment in other philosophies. The convinced Protestant of old is no longer so convinced, and while the crowd's more pagan in a way than it was, it's much more prepared to listen."

Mrs. Sheed will make a three months' tour of America—her fourth—before returning to England. Her husband, who is with her on this trip, is a frequent visitor to American shores. The two have a publishing house in New York, which provides for the reading man the exposition of Catholic doctrine which the Catholic Evidence Guild orally affords the man in the street.

Strictly Speaking

Try These.

1. Is it permissible to use continually and continuously interchangeably?
2. What is kelp?
3. Is irate properly called EYE-rate or IR-rate?
4. What is chauvinism and how is it pronounced?
5. Is this sentence correct: "His whereabouts are unknown?"

Answers Here.

1. No. Continually implies a close succession or recurrence. Continuously implies an uninterrupted continuation. Thus: "He discusses politics continually," but "Mary studied continuously from early morning until noon."

2. Kelp is any of a number of large brown seaweeds.

3. Irate is properly called either eye-RATE or EYE-rate, but not IR-rate.

4. Chauvinism (SHOW-vin-iz-m) implies either a blind devotion to a lost cause or exaggerated patriotism. It comes from the name of Nicholas Chauvin (show-van), a soldier whose demonstrative patriotism and attachment to Napoleon came to be ridiculed by his comrades.

5. No. Whereabouts is regarded as singular and requires a singular verb.

Brazilian Law Gives Women Equal Rights

Feminists Still Believe in Cooking and Sewing, However.

This is the second of a series of six daily articles in which the foreign bureaus of the Associated Press describe the progress of feminism in many lands.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP).—Brazilian law says that women were created equal to men.

Women may aspire to the presidency of the republic. They may vote, they may be—the constitution of July 16 says "shall be"—paid wages equal to those of men for equal tasks or equal accomplishment. They may not be refused any job in any walk of life by reason of their sex, or marital status.

But even the Brazilian Federation for Feminist Progress, which won these rights for women, continues to believe in cooking, mending socks and love.

Dr. Bertha Lutz, president of the federation, said that women appreciate their right to aspire to the presidency, but do not believe a woman will attain that post soon.

"We would be hard put to overcome the intense barrier of masculine ambition and egoism," she said.

Brains Vs. Beauty.

Dr. Lutz, who patterns her ceaseless feminist campaign after those of women leaders of the United States, said she found it hard to determine whether brains or beauty count the more in winning the support of men.

"Women's tenderness and intelligence wins only superfor men," she said.

While personally she favors birth control, Dr. Lutz points out that Brazilian feminism has no doctrine on the subject.

Feminism of the United States, as represented by women like Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, is attractive to Brazilian women, Dr. Lutz said.

Argentine Women Confident.

Buenos Aires (AP).—Except in San Juan Province in the Andean foothills, women of Argentina have not succeeded in winning the right to vote. But they are confident they will get it before long.

In recent years they have made an outstanding legal conquest—a law giving married women full civil rights as to property. It was one more blast at a tradition common in Latin countries which held that a husband had a right to direct his wife's property and control her wealth.

After this and other triumphs of feminism Argentine women, like others of South America, have stepped out of their old-fashioned seclusion. Liberal tendencies of a large British colony here and an influx of Americans after the World War did much to make Argentine women aspire to new freedom.

Increasing numbers of women have been entering universities. Six per cent of the medical students in Buenos Aires are women; 40 per cent of the students of odontology are women, while in the philosophy courses 60 per cent of the students are college girls.

PILLAR S S TO POST

Prints of Junior League President Taken at Justice Exhibit.

MISS ANNE CARTER GREENE, newly elected president of the Junior League, was "apprehended" by a handsome sleuth, Earl Van Waggoner, who proceeded at once to take her fingerprints. This happened at the Department of Justice exhibit, which Earl was explaining to visitors in the Mayflower the other day. The exhibit included many interesting charts that had to do with fingerprinting and clues in the Lindbergh and Dillinger cases. Miss Greene submitted somewhat coyly to having her fingerprint taken. A lot of people who had their fingerprints taken that day by Mr. Waggoner labored under the misapprehension (or pretended to) that fingerprinting was something like palmistry.

• • • •

"If my fingerprint is of the 'arch' type, does that mean I am hiding characteristics of the arch criminal?" was one of the facetious questions. Mr. Waggoner solemnly explained that the world's greatest moralist and the worst criminal might have fingerprints of the "arch" type (the rarest), but it wouldn't mean a thing.

"But that might indicate that the good man had a dual personality and the part of him that he had sternly suppressed was as bad as the worst criminal, might'nt it?" asked the wag.

• • • •

"There is no evidence to show that a fingerprint gives any indication of character; is is merely useful as a means of identification," answered Mr. Waggoner, wearily. These persistent jokesters had begun to bore him. Many of those who permitted Mr. Waggoner to press their thumbs on an ink pad and then upon specially sensitized slips of paper pretended to be vastly concerned that these fingerprints might be the means of their undoing some day, but many nevertheless, signed their names blithely to the lips and left them to be entered in the files.

• • • •

Miss Greene compared her fingerprint with the charts hanging upon the wall and was disappointed to find that she had the ulnar-loop type, which is the most common, and accounts for 60 per cent of all fingerprints. However, she has many other distinctions, the the main one being that she is one of the prettiest girls in Washington. By the way, watch for Earl Van Waggoner in the movies. He is going to appear in the news reels soon with data concerning the Lindbergh case.

District Attorney Samuel J. Foley, of New York, who is conducting the investigation of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, was a page in the House of Representatives when Charles A. Lindbergh's father was a member. Young Lindbergh, who was about 8 years of age at that time, loved to run in on the floor of the House to get pennies from his father, and it was Page Foley's duty to escort him in and out. Bill Donaldson and Jimmie Griffin, who were also pages at that time, remember the active youngster very well.

Woman's place in aviation is becoming more important every year believes Mrs. Charles M. Savage, shown here preparing for a pleasure trip. Although she flies only for the sport of it, Mrs. Savage has about 115 solo hours to her credit.

Mrs. Charles M. Savage Sees Feminine Pilots as Good as Men.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

ACTRESSES admit they thrive on emotional scenes. Even tractable housewives have been known to relish a little argument now and then. But a happy, unruffled home life is essential to womeh fliers, Mrs. Charles M. Savage, president of the Washington Women Pilots' Association, has learned.

"Women are inclined to take their troubles with them wherever they go," said Mrs. Savage yesterday. "A man can quarrel with his wife and then forget all about it the minute something else comes along to engage his attention. But a woman can't do that. She keeps mulling the thing over and over. Even when she's flying along at the controls of a ship she keeps thinking about the quarrel. She says to herself, 'I should have said thus and so to him,' or 'why did he say thus and so to me?' That's bad. She needs steady nerves and an undisturbed mind while she's up in the air."

Give a woman a chance to be tranquil and she is a man's equal when it comes to piloting an airplane, believes Mrs. Savage, who has 115 solo hours to her credit.

Sees Opportunity for Women.

Although she flies only for the sport of it, she sees tremendous opportunities for women in aviation.

"The biggest drawback is lack of money," she said. "It's an expensive process, learning to fly. Lots of women who would make excellent pilots simply can't afford to take lessons or to rent a ship, much less buy one. But I believe the day will come when women will be at the controls of mail and passenger transports. Some of the companies would be willing to take women pilots now, I understand, if it weren't for the squeamishness of passengers."

Since the process of learning to fly is so expensive, Mrs. Savage is in favor of camps for women where they can receive instruction from officers in the Government's air service.

"That idea originated with the Women's Air Reserve of California and I'm for it, so is the Washington Women Pilots Association," she said, as her head in its smart little tricorne bobbed up and down decisively.

Would Be Ready to Serve.

"The Government would get a grand return on this investment," she continued. "The women pilots would stand by, ready to give their services to their country whenever and wherever they were needed. They would be able to fly doctors, nurses and supplies to areas that had been stricken with disease or fire or flood. And if this country should ever be invaded, women fliers could make valuable observations from the air even if they weren't permitted to engage in actual combat."

Mrs. Savage is looking forward to the Thirty-fourth Congress of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale next week in the Capital because it will impress upon the public the importance of women in aviation.

"The congress will prove to the people of Washington that women are able to go to the top in flying as in everything else," she said, and again the little black tricorne bobbed up and down.

Accompanies Husband.

She herself learned to pilot an airplane when she and her husband, Capt. Savage, were living in San Diego with Lindbergh Field for a neighbor. That was about three years ago. Last year Mrs. Savage flew from St. Louis to New York in the Liberty treasure hunt, her longest solo flight. Now she frequently flies along in her plane beside her husband in an Army plane.

As president of the Washington Women Pilots Association she is trying to get a better airport for the Capital. The association is giving her its strongest support in the project.

"We believe the location of Hoover Field is excellent, but the field itself is very bad. It should be enlarged and the depressions should be filled in. And Military road should be removed from the field entirely," she declared. "If Washington had a better airport it would get a great deal more air traffic. I'm sure of that. So is the Women Pilots Association."

More Study Religion.

Eye Cosmetics Help Correct Beauty Flaws

All Kinds of Defects Can Be Removed by Skillful Use.

By Frances Mangum.

SOME WOMEN'S faces are as lacking in facial expression as a statue of Venus de Milo. Blind-looking marble eyes rob the faces of every gleam of intelligence, life and beauty.

On the other hand, just as portraits, even those which are mediocre in technique, seem full of life and feeling largely because of the depth and color of the painted eyes, there are women who add vitality, strength and charm to their countenances by accentuating the beauty of their eyes.

Mysterious eyes, glowing eyes, softly tender eyes—all varieties are so well depicted by famous portrait painters that they can be achieved readily in real life by the skillful use of eye cosmetics. Pale, straight lashes rob even the most alluring eyes of half their charm. Pale, unshaded lids make those naturally bright dull and expressionless. Without dark, well-defined eyebrows arching above them, the loveliest have an unpleasant, staring look.

The clever woman can remedy any beauty deficiencies which her eyes possess. If they are a light watery blue she can make them seem infinitely darker by wearing the proper colors, blue of any shade, green, gray, lilac, purple, and dresses trimmed in these colors. Blue mascara is her next step, and then an eyeshadow, gray, blue, green or violet, depending on her ensemble and the time of day or night. Rouge high on her cheeks and close beneath her eyes will give them a glow and sparkle and make them seem several times larger.

It matters little the color of your eyes just so long as that color is accentuated and given full play.

As for the shape of the eyes, that too can be improved. Shadow carried slightly beyond the outer edge gives them an exotic effect. Mascara brushed heavily on the corner lashes does the same thing. Eyebrows plucked in a line slightly curving take the curse off of round button eyes. Narrow brows emphatically arched like semicircles inevitably give a doll-like expression to the eyes.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Reader Advises "Impossible" to Keep Occupied; Join Delphians.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I read the letter from "Impossible" in Sunday's Post with much interest. Your advice was good, but I really do not think she needs to consult a psychiatrist. It cost me $20 and anybody might have given me the advice he gave me.

"Keep pleasantly occupied," he told me. Easy? Not as easy as people think. My case was almost exactly like that of "Impossible." My husband could not make any social contacts for me, and as a stranger here I found that the people I met were busy and did not seem interested in me.

• • • •

If only strangers could meet strangers!

Now, then, to go back to "Impossible." Please answer her again and tell her there is a study group here in Washington known as the Delphians. It does not cost much to join them and she can file an application with their secretary, Mrs. Wilson.

My own case was not solved in this way. Organization work in church was my cure, but not everybody gets an opportunity to work in a club or church. I am burning up with the urge to start a Strangers' Club in cities. I am capable, but I have a husband who needs me, too, so I may never do this work I should love to do.

• • • •

Between 30 and 40 years of age an emotional change takes place in a childless woman, and if she lives a quiet, peaceful, uneventful life, she becomes morbid. Get her playing bridge with a dozen women, give her parties to anticipate, some new clothes, and you have cured her! Believe me, I know. I suffered agony. Life seemed so futile (that was my expression). Now, everything is changed. I sing at my housework, am never discontented or unhappy, but the cure is by no means easy to attain. I grasped the opportunity to work in a church and then made friends.

• • • •

Clubs and churches are not interested in the needs of an individual. They are cold and indifferent, but strangers in every city should be taken care of and this long letter may give you a suggestion as to what to do about it.

Can't you let "Impossible" know about the Delphians' organization in some way? I feel certain it will help her.

APPRECIATIVE READER.

DEAR APPRECIATIVE READER: Since I do not have the address of the woman who signed herself "Impossible," I am printing your friendly, constructive answer in this column, with the hope that she may read it and benefit by it.

Blackheads Need Stern Treatments

Removal Not an Overnight Matter, But It Can Be Done.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

BLACKHEADS are even worse than measles. They may not be contagious but they are far harder to get rid of. Some women who have tried this, that and the other to drive them away become so discouraged they declare nothing will!

Unfortunately science hasn't been able to give us anything yet which takes them away instantly, but a certain cosmetician, whose study of beauty aids has been in every way scientific, sponsors a coarse powder which does wonderful things to a skin marred with blackheads.

The powder comes in a little tin container which keeps it fresh as the day it was packed. A little of it mixed with water and then rubbed on the face, left a couple of minutes and rinsed off with cold water does do a miraculous cleansing job. The powder penetrates the pores and literally unearths bits of extraneous matter which cause blackheads—and large pores.

Furthermore, as it is rinsed from the face it stimulates the skin, causing the blood to circulate and thus bring new life to the skin.

In using this preparation, don't expect a miracle to occur overnight. But stick to it for a week or ten days and use it consistently. You'll be amazed to see the effect of this very thorough cleansing on your skin.

Bottles as Ornaments.

It was strange to see just ordinary bottles transformed to such interesting ornaments. It was even stranger to note the skilled workmanship that went into making them what they are.

Each bottle boasts a scenic interior, either a Dutch landscape or a sea scene. On solid composition water little vessels with widespread sails lie at anchor, "as idle as a painted ship upon a painted ocean."

Tempting Salads.

Salads are even more tempting when they're gracefully served. An F street shop not only holds this to be true but offers you a unique and attractive way of serving.

In the upstairs department is an odd set, a rosewood fork and spoon, clipped together in scissor fashion. As the fingers press the loops in the handle the set opens wide and enables you to lift gracefully and securely a fine big helping from the salad bowl. Accompanying the strange but practical little set is a verse that reads:

"To serve your salads dainty
This fork and spoon were made.
When you give a party
They'll be a sure 'first aid.'"

Not only does the fork and spoon answer the purpose for serving, but it's as odd and as attractive a little gift as you'll find anywhere.

Three Little Pigs.

That the three little pigs are still holding their own is apparent from the replicas of them selling like wild fire.

The three of them in a chummy little group are made of China and packed away in a cardboard box, which sells for 25 cents. Nowadays so many little girls think dolls are "sissy" they'd welcome a gift of the three little pigs instead.

If you'd rather have larger pigs—and far more pliable—it's also possible to buy them made of rubber, and dressed up fit to kill. It's a great deal of fun to play with these. Squeeze them and toss them around all you please, and the little pigs are none the worse for wear.

Washable Powder Puffs.

Remember, no amount of anything is going to keep the blackheads away unless you're careful to use a clean powder puff. Most women intend to, but they neglect to wash their puffs, or else their puffs won't wash and they put off buying others.

Due to the fact there's a sale in a downtown store, regular 35 cent lamb's wool puffs are selling now for 15 cents. These puffs are very soft and soothing to the skin, and they wash perfectly. It's a shame not to take advantage of their present price.

Glove Economy.

Look up last year's cleaning bills and you'll find that kid gloves were an expensive item. By the time they're cleaned every week or so you pay for them three times over. There's no need for it, either. A local store has a cleanser that not only takes off the soil but preserves the smart tone and surface.

A small box of the cleaner will not only insure your gloves' tidiness but will keep both your kid and patent leather shoes looking brand new for months.

How to Keep Well

Too Little Thyroid.

MORE than 60 years ago an English physician observed that patients sometimes presented what he calls a "thick, expressionless appearance." The whole body looked swollen. This was particularly noticeable in the cheeks, eyelids, nose and hands. The hair, eyelashes and eyebrows were thin, and the skin was dry and rough. The voice was harsh, monotonous in quality and lifeless. As a rule the patient was quite sensitive to cold, the pulse was slow and there appeared to be physical listlessness and mental dullness.

The above symptoms are presented by the condition known as myxedema, which is brought on by too little secretion of the thyroid gland. It can be produced artificially in a normal individual by removing the entire thyroid. Surgeons, therefore, have learned that in order to prevent myxedema all of the thyroid must not be removed.

When the thyroid is either absent or fails to grow in children the same situation results and the child becomes a wide-faced, flat-nosed, thick-lipped dwarf. The legs and arms are sometimes misshapen. In children the condition is called cretinism.

In 1893 it was discovered that the basal metabolism—that is, the rate of oxygen consumption—is usually low in these patients—approximately 40 per cent below normal. The condition, however, presents varying degrees of severity, depending upon the amount of thyroid deficiency. Even though a thyroid may be enlarged (goiter), it does not mean that the function of the gland is adequate.

Curiously enough, myxedema occurs much more frequently in women than in men. The disease usually comes on in adults after the age of 30, and the symptoms, noted above, are the direct opposite of those of hyperthyroidism or too much thyroid secretion. The diagnosis is reasonably simple and is based upon a lowered metabolic rate and the physical changes presented by the patient. There is a gradual slowing of the mental and physical activities, an increase in weight, a decrease in appetite and a dulling of the facial expression.

The treatment of myxedema by means of thyroid gland extract, or by the use of the chemical substance secreted by the thyroid gland (thyroxin) is a striking triumph of glandular therapy. Probably the most satisfactory method of administering thyroid is by mouth. The dosage is usually started at one or two grains each day, gradually increasing until the maximum dose of five or six grains is reached.

Bosses' Rating Of Shop Girls Found Wrong

NEW YORK, Sept. 30 (AP).—The bosses do not understand their salesgirls, and that accounts for one of the troubles of shoppers.

The study showing this misunderstanding was made by Charles C. Stech, New York sales expert, for the heads of a number of the department stores of the metropolitan area.

Stech first asked the bosses to rate the best selling qualities of their sales people. Afterward he learned from the girls what qualities they considered most important.

Against these two sets of opinions he checked the actual sales of the girls. The bosses rated "initiative" as the foremost quality in sales success.

Training Rated First.

But it was not so in the volume of sales. The most selling was done by girls who had been trained in one way or another in the details of their own particular jobs. The girls so trained sold 18 per cent more than untrained sales people.

The second best incentive in actual improvement of sales was the thing which the bosses had rated last. It was "get sales people to realize that their superiors understand the difficulties of the job of selling."

The girls who believed they had this understanding from bosses sold 16 per cent more goods than those lacking that sentiment.

The bosses thought that the second strongest point in inducing good salesmanship was to make it clear that a sales person's work is judged not only by total sales, but also by the service given to the customer.

Initiative Third.

However, in actual increase of sales this point rated fifth. In the sales records initiative stood in third place. Fourth was to provide a good way for the sales person to find out whether her work was improving.

"My investigations," Mr. Stech said, "have convinced me that sales people can be motivated powerfully by incentives which have no close connection with the desire for job security and larger wages. When the more thoughtful executives in the retailing field turn their attention to a thorough study of motives for better salesmanship, it is not unlikely that this weakest phase of large-scale retailing can be turned into one of the strongest."

What Today Means

"Libra."

IF OCTOBER 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

Avoid any entangling alliances in business or social affairs on this date, for complications might follow that probably would prove embarrassing. Business transactions involving engineering or architectural planning to be successfully handled will require the greatest amount of care to be exercised in explaining what are ordinarily considered insignificant details, for a competitor may have unduly stressed importance to small points usually disregarded.

Money may be available in satisfactory amounts for worthy enterprises. In trade transactions refrain from mincing words, for plain speech may prevent misunderstandings. There might be a possibility of important papers being mislaid, so caution is advised. Social activities may prove inducive to some one indulging in a lot of small talk in which by insinuation reflection may be cast on a mutual friend's actions. If you are wise you will refrain from expressing yourself. Married and engaged couples, as well as suitors, may avoid complications if they are careful not to exaggerate any commonplace happenings.

If a woman and October 3 is your birthday, do not allow your good nature to be imposed upon through the fear of offending people. If you will assert yourself more and insist upon receiving what is justly due you, friends and relatives may accord you greater consideration. You should have a sufficiently artistic nature to enable you to make a success in music, art, the drama, or designing.

In the commercial field you should do well in tea-room managing; or some type of exclusive shop dealing in women's wearing apparel. As a married woman you should be very happy, if you are careful the man you accept is thoroughly congenial and knows what consideration really means.

The child born on October 3, when it arrives at school age, must not be encouraged if it complains about its teachers or their methods of discipline, except in very exceptional cases which are very carefully investigated before conclusions are reached.

If a man and October 3 is your natal day, you will be very successful providing you do not let others do your thinking for you. Formulate your own ideas and carry them out. The man who is always fearful of making a mistake usually makes a great many. You have a great deal of originality, which, if expressed in a practical way, should gain you recognition.

Greater Employment Seen for Graduates

An increase in employment opportunities for the college graduate is noticeable in the report of the occupational bureau of Barnard College, made public recently by Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve. More openings and job placements were on record than in any of the three preceding years, according to Miss Katherine S. Doty, head of the bureau.

The improvement is attributed partly to the FERA, which provided jobs for nearly 100 students. At present social service work offers the most opportunities to college graduates, with positions of secretary-stenographer next in availability.

Culbertson on Bridge

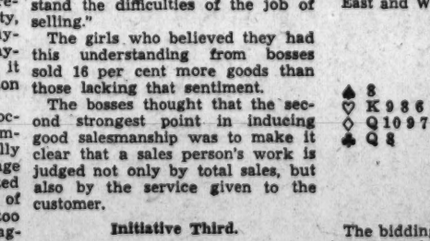
A Pseudo Throw-In.

Every advanced play in Bridge has a clever twin brother—the "pseudo." The brilliant squeeze is often no more effective than some line of play which seems so like a squeeze that the opponents, thinking there is no escape, resort to unsound defense and toss away tricks they might have won. The throw-in play, from which there is no escape when the position of the cards is just right, may likewise be simulated to such a degree that unwary adversaries may be sure that the throw-in play has been effective against them and, as a result, throw away tricks which by more careful play they might have won.

The success of the pseudo throw-in play is usually due to people's justifiable hesitancy to make a lead which will afford the Declarer a discard in one hand and a ruff in the other. Proper counting will, of course, overcome this difficulty in most cases.

South, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♠	Pass
3♠ (1)	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A slight overbid; South should have passed. His Rebid was based upon the hope that North's single Raise might have been the absolute maximum of four and one-half playing tricks. Fortunately for South, this was the case, although there was nevertheless a very poor chance for the contract—it depended upon finding the club Queen-Jack doubleton in one opponent's hand, or upon an adverse error.

West opened the heart six, East played the Jack and South the Ace. South now prepared for the pseudo throw-in by leading a diamnod and ducking; East won with the diamond Jack and returned a heart to West's King. West now led a diamond, and Dummy's Ace won. After leading two rounds of spades, on the second of which West played the heart deuce, South led Dummy's diamond eight and ruffed it, and then threw East in the lead with the spade Queen. East now knew that South held no more diamonds and no more hearts, because West had led the six and later discarded the deuce. East was therefore quite sure that a heart lead would give South a ruff and discard. Because of this he led a club, dropping West's Queen under North's King and allowing South to finesse back for the Jack to his Ace-nine. South lost only three tricks and made his game.

Had East bothered to count out South's hand he would have known that he could safely lead a heart. South was shown to have held five spades, two diamonds and two hearts. He must therefore hold four clubs, and a discard would do him no good, since he would still have a club trick to lose. By leading a heart East would have allowed a ruff and discard, but he would have saved the game.

South nevertheless deserves great credit for the clever way in which he led East to think that a throw-in play had been made. South's chance to make his contract by finding a doubleton Queen-Jack of clubs was just as good at the end of the hand if the pseudo throw-in had not worked.

Tomorrow's Hand.

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Rare Recipes of Indian Cooks Are Compiled

A COOKBOOK so different it was hailed by the Indian Bureau as an "obvious rarity as a bibliographical find" has been compiled at the Kiowa Agency, Anadarko, Okla., reports the Associated Press.

It tells just how Indian women cook the edibles that grow wild over the prairie, with a note that the only ingredient in the whole book that had to be "traded for" was sugar.

Its author, Miss Dorothy W. Smith, home demonstration agent, sets down her directions just as the Kiowa women, whom she calls "excellent cooks," have given them to her.

Most of the recipes start with the principle: "First find your vegetable," telling what month of the year each may be lurking on the prairie ready to be converted into savory soup or tasty pudding.

A Recipe for Bread.

A recipe for bread starts off the book: "Mix parched cornmeal with meat soup, make a stiff dough, add salt, place bread on a two-forked stick and cook over hot coals."

The noble mesquite bean, foundation for tea, pudding, flour and mush, next gets a play, with this preface:

"Time of year, late summer, about September. Mesquite trees have a fragrant flower. Pick sweet beans, some of the trees have beans with a bitter taste. Beans are fich in sugar. Store beans in clean burlap sacks in a dry place. Keep all winter in a dry place."

The Indian cucumber, Indian sweet potato, Indian cabbage, Indian tomato—each a vegetable wild and different from the white man's of the same name—has its place in the recipes.

Food New to Whites.

There are victuals, too, which the white man never heard: toan, which grows 4 feet tall in the sand in May and June, with an edible root; tana, with a top that looks like a radish, a purple flower, a round black root which when cooked "tastes like a turnip," and roots of the cattail bush.

Here are some sample recipes. Try 'em if you've time to go to Oklahoma to find the makings:

Indian potatoes: Fall of the year. Found along the creeks. Size of an egg. Black on the outside, orange color inside, some light color. Method of cooking: Wash off dirt. Boil potatoes with peelings for an hour, Cool. Note: Don't blow on the potatoes, if you do the potatoes will get watery.

Skunk berries: Pick in early summer, June. Pick ripe berries, red berries. Place in sun to dry. Keep stirring. Dry in about one week. How to cook: Pick over, wash. Pound or grind. Boil and strain. Cook until the juice is red. Add meat grease and sweeten, and cornmeal flour to thicken.

Sigma Kappa to Meet.

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Sigma Kappa Sorority will hold its October meeting Thursday evening in the chapter house, 2020 G street, at 8 o'clock. After the meeting Mrs. Channing O. Davis will sing a group of songs.

THE MAN WITHOUT NERVES

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

In the London suburb of Sandywayes, Sam Cresson has committed suicide and Sir Julian Bott has been found dead, too. On the night of the latter crime, Anthony Sarson saw a car near the lonely home of Mme. de Sayal and later returned to investigate. Mme. de Sayal drew him into her house, gave him a revolver "for protection." Leaving, he was knocked unconscious, awakening next morning in her home. She pledged him to secrecy. It was not until he returned to the village that he learned of Sir Julian's death. In accordance with his promise, he said only that he was searching for the mysterious car, fell and was unconscious on the ground all night. Anthony's sister, Pauline, likes a young stranger named Tyssen, who is visiting in the village, investigating the tragedies for color for a novel; other villagers resent his intrusion.

"MR. TYSSEN."

"Miss Sarson?"

"Do you know you are earning the reputation in this neighborhood of being an exceedingly mysterious person?"

He paused in the act of rolling his cigarette and turned toward her. There was a somewhat indefinite smile upon his lips.

"Why?"

Pauline hesitated for a moment. They were seated in lounge chairs under the cedar tree and Pauline had been wondering just how angry Anthony would be when he came down from the hill and found her companion there.

"Well, for one thing," she said, "those four or five approaches you played in the darkness on the Paradise golf links the other evening!"

"You two are the only people who know anything about them," he remarked.

"Well, they have made you a mystery to Anthony, at any rate," she went on. "He declares that he has seen all the best golfers in the world, that he has never seen one get so far with light iron as you and never seen a man, except Bobby Jones, who could make the ball break back on the green as you did. He doesn't believe that you are an unknown golfer and he doesn't believe that your name is Tyssen!"

"Does he suggest any reason," the young man asked, "why I should be masquerading here under a false name?"

Confidence Asked.

"None at all," she replied. "He is curious. So am I."

"I can't say I'm sorry to hear that," he declared cheerfully.

"Why?"

"I'd like you to be interested in me anyhow, anyway. I'd like you to be interested in me as I am in you."

"Perhaps I should be," she said softly, "if only you would take me into your confidence, Mr. Tyssen. Tell me about yourself."

"There is nothing interesting to tell," he assured her.

"Do you mean that?"

"Yes."

Mr. Timothy Sarson, very large and picturesque looking in his soft-fronted evening shirt and drooping tie, stood on the threshold of the French windows, momentarily blotting out the lamplight.

"Anthony back yet, Pauline?" he inquired.

"Not yet, Father."

The latter looked with secret disapproval at the young man by his daughter's side. He had no fancy for the youth of the period who did not trouble to change their attire in the evening. On the other hand, the young man's swift rising to his feet was a mark in his favor.

"Why don't you ask Mr. Tyssen to have a whisky and soda, Pauline?" he suggested.

"I am a bad hostess," she confessed.

Reckless Youth.

"Thank you very much."

Mr. Timothy Sarson stood on one side to make room for the young man. He led him to the sideboard and himself poured out the whisky with generous hand.

"Pre-war. It won't hurt you," he said. "Soda water at your elbow. Seen anything of Anthony this evening?"

"Was he up at the Wilderness?"

"Yes, sir. He was calling on Madame de Sayal."

Mr. Sarson frowned.

"I wish to goodness he'd keep away from that woman," he exclaimed irritably. "There's gossip enough, as it is. Were you there, too, then?"

"I looked in," Tyssen admitted.

"Another of the beautiful lady's victims?"

"Not I," was the emphatic reply. "I was there to see if I could pick up any information about last night."

"That's all very well for a story writer like you," Mr. Sarson grumbled. "Besides, you were in your bed last night. I wonder Anthony hasn't the sense to see that it's the stupidest thing he can do to go playing about up there, with all this gossip going around."

Gossip Rampant.

"You've heard what they're saying, of course?" he asked.

"I hear everything," Tyssen confessed. "I am afraid I'm rather a gossip myself, when there's anything of this sort about."

"Well, I wish to goodness you'd tell Anthony what a damned silly thing he's doing, hanging about after that woman," his host growled. "He's out all night the night of the murder and comes back with an idiotic story which I'll swear our friend Inspector Penny doesn't believe, for one. That fellow Julian Bott is found shot within a few yards of the woman's house and yet Anthony must go up there again, spending the evening with her. The lad's crazy!"

"It seems injudicious," Tyssen observed. "On the other hand, it wouldn't be easy for any one who knows Anthony to believe that he had anything to do with it."

"There's no sentiment about these damned policemen," Mr. Sarson pointed out. "I know for a fact that Penny is having Anthony watched. The last place he ought to go near is the bungalow."

"So long as there is no direct evidence," Tyssen said reassuringly, "I don't suppose that it matters very much."

The young man edged away toward the open window and Mr. Sarson picked up his Times. Pauline welcomed her visitor back. She was a very attractive-looking young woman, lying back in her cool white frock in the tangled moonlight.

Mysterious Chap.

"Father's worried, isn't he?" she asked as he resumed his seat.

"Seems so," he admitted. "I don't think myself it's very wise of your brother to be up there. Mme. de Sayal is bound to be a suspected person for a short time."

"Is there any mystery about her really, I wonder?" Pauline speculated.

"She has a foreign name and a foreign title," her companion observed. "They fit in well for my story."

"When are you going to read me some of it?" she asked.

"Not until I get it into better shape than it is at present," he replied. "I'm beginning to see my way through. When I've found it—yes, I promise you shall be the second reader."

"Why not the first?" she pouted. His lips parted in a faint smile.

"The first has been promised for some time," he confided. "It is a different sort of affair, that, altogether."

"How thrilling! Will there be any real persons in it?"

"Most of them," he replied. "I am taking my characters from life."

They heard Anthony's swinging footsteps coming up the drive. He came nearer and recognized Tyssen with a scowl. Pauline intervened quickly.

"Tony," she suggested, "why don't you speak to Mr. Tyssen now about the golf match?"

Invitation Extended.

"What about turning out for the Paradise Golf Club against the 'Society,' Tyssen?" he asked. "I have been speaking to Lord Milhaven about it, and he is quite willing to make you a temporary member, and so are the committee. Of course, if you should happen to do well for us and you should care to accept it, I am sure that you could have a regular membership afterward."

"Thank you very much," was the somewhat vague reply. "I am not playing golf this season."

Anthony frowned.

"If you are spending the summer here," he urged, "would it not be just as well to give us neighbors a leg up? After all, the Paradise Golf Club may be a terribly snobbish affair, but most of the best players in England are members, and it is a gorgeous course."

"I am sorry," Tyssen regretted, "but I just don't want to play golf this season, and that's all there is about it."

Anthony turned on his heel. He was not in the best of humors.

"Well, I call that very unsporting," he declared.

Strange Question.

"Well, in a way, if Anthony's right, and you really are a golfer, I don't think it's very kind of you," she said. "The Paradise Golf Club has a most imposing list of members, but nearly all the strong players are away this season."

"When did your brother say the match was?"

"Thursday week. They make quite a fete day of it here. The golf grounds are thrown open to the public free of charge, and Lord Milhaven sends down a wonderful lunch, a marquee, his servants and all that sort of thing. He used to play himself until the last few years."

"He doesn't turn out at all now, does he?"

"I have never seen him. He never practices and I shouldn't think he's good enough."

Tyssen passed one hand through his untidy mop of hair. Then he commenced to rapidly roll a cigarette.

"Which do they play first—the four-balls or the singles?"

She turned her head and looked at him wonderingly.

"I've no idea. I only know that for some reason or other, both rounds are played after lunch. What difference does that make?"

He evaded the question. It struck Pauline that he was looking extraordinarily uncomfortable.

"Really," she continued, "you are becoming more of a mystery than ever. Why all this fuss about a simple golf match?"

Sudden Change.

"Because I'm a silly idiot," he answered. "If your brother still wants me to——"

"It is I who want you to now," she interrupted, smiling at him.

"All right," he consented. "I'll play. I think I'd do pretty well anything you asked me," he added.

She laughed as she rose to her feet. For a moment she took his arm and she was startled to see the transformation in him. He seemed suddenly to become a person of more dignity. She forgot his shabby clothes and irritating mannerisms. With the metamorphosis came a larger measure of caution on her part.

"I must go in now," she said quietly. "Good night." I'm glad you're playing."

Anthony, entering the house, had avoided a meeting with his father. He was filled with a sudden desire to examine once more the revolver which he had hidden away. He mounted the stairs and entered his dressing room. He stood there, listening to be sure there was no one around. Then he secured the door and, with a key which he drew from his pocket, unlocked the drawer where he had left the revolver. He lifted the little pile of shirts under which he had placed it. Then the shock came! He could have sworn to the exact spot where he had left the gun. There was no sign of it anywhere. He flung the shirts out onto the floor, emptied the whole contents of the drawer. It took him scarcely a minute to realize the bald, horrible truth. Some one had been there before him. The revolver was gone!

Canned or Fresh Tomatoes Come in Handy for Pick-Up Supper.

By Susan Mills.

Cooking meals from cans requires a small amount of time, and a touch of originality to make them good. Tomatoes, canned or fresh, can do more to make a meal tasteful than almost another article.

The next time you have to get a pick-up supper, reach for a can of tomatoes and use them this way:

Tomato, Corn and Cheese on Toast.

3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons melted butter or other fat
2 cups canned tomatoes
1 onion, sliced
2 cups canned corn
2 teaspoons salt
¼ pound sharp cheese, shaved thin

Brown the flour in a heavy skillet, remove the flour from the skillet, and blend with 2 tablespoons of the fat. Brown the onion in the remaining fat, add the other ingredients except the cheese, and cook for about 10 minutes. Stir in the cheese and when melted serve on thin, crisp toast.

Spanish Rice.

Chop about ½ pound of salt pork and fry until crisp. Slice 2 onions and brown them in the fat. Add 1 quart of fresh or canned tomatoes and 3 to 4 cups of cooked rice. Season to taste with pepper, and salt if needed.

Tomato Soup.

1½ quarts of tomatoes, canned or fresh
½ onion
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt

Baked Fish Recipe Is Dutch Product

EUROPEANS and foreign-bred Americans eat a great deal of fish and cook it in attractive ways. Here's a Dutch recipe for "baked fish, Hollenden," using haddock or flounder fillets that are shipped frozen to all parts of the country, or serving-size pieces of any large dry-meated fish, like cod or halibut. The Bureau of Home Economics has tried the recipe in its food laboratories.

Fry a few thin slices of salt pork until almost crisp and place them with sliced onion and a piece of bay leaf on the bottom of a shallow baking dish. Lay fillets of haddock on these seasonings, and spread the fish with a paste of flour mixed with the fat that fried out of the salt pork. Cover with bread crumbs and lay a few small pieces of salt pork over the top. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees F.) for about an hour.

Tri-State Gang Suspect Is Held Here for Trial

Returned From Baltimore for Hearing in Two Holdups.

Sam Berlin, suspected participant in depredations of the "tri-State" gang, was committed to the District Jail yesterday to await trial on two robbery indictments.

Berlin was arrested several weeks ago in Baltimore. He was brought here yesterday following extradition proceedings. Police said Berlin was a suspect in the holdup of a local brewery and robbery of a mail convoy at Union Station last year. He is under indictment on both counts, police said.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, detective chief, said Berlin held only "temporary" membership in the "tri-State" gang.

"The brewery and Union Station jobs were his only activities with the mob," Burke said.

Francis White, mail guard, shot during the Union Station holdup, is still in Providence Hospital. Complications from a bullet wound in the leg have kept him under care of physicians for more than 11 months.

Escaped Gangsters' Lawyer Quits Case

Richmond, Oct. 2 (AP).—Charles W. Moss, attorney for Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, gangsters who shot their way out of Richmond City Jail, has washed his hands of the case.

"By their desperate, cold-blooded conduct, to which I was a witness at the jail, I feel I am relieved of any obligation to act as their counsel," Moss said. "I am through with the case."

Moss had defended the two gangsters, convicted of the holdup murder of E. M. Huband, Federal Reserve truck driver, here last March. The attorney was present in the jail Saturday when Mais and Legenza drew their smuggled pistols and shot down three officers in their break for freedom.

Police, who have searched Virginia and neighboring States, are so far without definite traces of the gangsters.

Police Grill 14 in Death Of Virginian

Jealousy Held Motive After Ill Feeling Is Reported.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Sifting the stories of 14 persons held here, Harrisonburg police tonight indicated they were near establishing the identity of the man who shot down Gleaves Calhoun, 27, in front of a home early Sunday.

The latest additions to the jail colony are Frank Conley, 19, of Hopkins Gap, West Rockingham, a CCC member, and Walker Berry, of Harrisonburg. Both are believed to have been at the party at the home of Mrs. Kirby Lam, in front of which the shooting occurred. Many of those held are from the Hopkins Gap section. Several others who were at the party are sought.

Chief of Police Hillyer Boice said all of those in jail will be held as material witnesses until there is a definite turn in the case, the first of its kind in Harrisonburg in two decades. He would not say whether he thought the guilty person was among those held.

Reports are current that the automatic pistol used by the assailant had been found but police would not confirm this.

Police are confident that jealousy was the motive, having learned there was ill-feeling among some of those at the party.

Allegany Laws On Liquor Hit

County's Set-up Must Be Changed, Judge Lindley Sloan Asserts.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 2 (Spl.). Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, in his charge to the grand jury at the opening of the October term of the Allegany County Circuit Court yesterday, criticized the weakness and inequalities of the Allegany County liquor law, which, he said, must be changed by the next Legislature.

He declared that under the present law the court was forced to act as a liquor licensing board, which he termed a nonjudicial function.

The issuance of nearly 200 beer and wine licenses had been a matter of serious concern to the court, the judge stated. He said that the sale of beer with food had been flagrantly violated on Sundays. He cited an instance where on the purchase of a bag of potato chips as food served with beer, a group of men bought and drank a case of beer at one resort.

Judge Sloan recommended that the law be changed so that the sale of beer, wine and liquor would be forbidden on Sundays. He said that some beer licensees, in order to draw trade, had set up dance halls in outlying sections where there is no police protection.

Job Bureau Will Remain In Annapolis

Transfer to Hyattsville Is Called Off After Protests.

Inaction on Change for Present Assured by Gov. Ritchie.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Activities of the Federal employment bureau at Annapolis will not be transferred to Hyattsville, as the center for southern Maryland, at least for the present, it was announced today after Gov. Ritchie had conferred with Employment Commissioner Oliver C. Short and representatives of several civic organizations, who launched a strong protest move.

The proposed consolidation was made known by Commissioner Short Thursday, and the date fixed for closing the local office was October 11. This brought a storm of protest from Annapolis and Anne Arundel County organizations. Appeals were wired to President Roosevelt, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Maryland's representation in Congress, in addition to laying the case before Gov. Ritchie.

The fact that public works projects approximating $3,000,000 in and around Annapolis furnished the main basis of the protests. Gov. Ritchie, after investigating the situation, among other things said:

"I am glad to inform the people of Anne Arundel County that no action will be taken toward the proposed consolidation, for the time being at least, and the people may rest assured that if the question of removing the offices from this county arises again, ample advance notice will be given and a full opportunity for a hearing accorded all who may be interested."

Held After Being Accused by Estranged Wife.

Middletown, Md., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—William Clark, 28, of Petersville, is in the Frederick County Jail on default of $1,000 bail awaiting action of the grand jury, charged with attempting to burn down the two-story frame house occupied by his estranged wife and infant child near Petersville.

Mrs. Clark testified last night at the hearing before Justice Jones at Brunswick that she saw her husband walk from the road to the rear of the house and later emerge from the cellar and quickly disappear. Entering the cellar she found a bunch of rags and some paper blazing furiously, licking the woodwork of the house. The rags and paper had been saturated with coal oil from a can nearby.

Mrs. Clark gathered up the blazing rags and paper and dumped them into a small stream near the house. She then drove three miles to Brunswick and notified Chief of Police William E. Chew, owner of the property, who made the arrest.

Tydings Holds To Party Ties

'Not a Rubber Stamp,' Says Senator, Explaining Praise by G.O.P.

Baltimore, Oct. 2 (AP).—Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, said today a citation by the Republican Senatorial-Congressional Committee for a speech warning against the piling up of appropriations did not keep him from being a Democrat.

Tydings was asked how it felt to be decorated by the Republican group in a pamphlet attacking the Roosevelt Administration. He replied that it was hardly becoming for a man who has been decorated to comment on the decoration or the reasons for it.

"I have made some speeches criticizing some measures and some speeches supporting other measures. I have not thought that I was sent to Washington to be a rubber stamp for anybody."

A number of prominent Democrats in addition to Tydings were decorated by the Republican committee. Among them were Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis, nominees for president in 1928 and 1924, respectively, Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia, and others.

G.O.P. Policy 'Picayunish,' Ritchie Says

Defends Administration Before Democratic Women's Group.

Radcliffe Is Speaker on Baltimore Program With Governor.

Baltimore, Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Branding the Republican State platform as "picayunish," Gov. Albert C. Ritchie today stoutly defended his administration of Maryland in a speech before members of the Democratic Women's Luncheon Club at the Hotel Emerson.

The Governor declared that "the Republican platform strikes me as being made up largely of picayunish propaganda designed to catch little groups of voters in this section and that section of the city and State."

He added that the Democratic platform, on the other hand, is "absolutely sound," and is based only on fundamental things "which our party can honestly promise and fulfill."

Another speaker was George L. Radcliffe, candidate for the United States Senate on the Democratic ticket. He declared the election of President Roosevelt was the most fortunate thing that ever happened to this country, and he pointed out that various political experiments must be tried before the Nation can emerge from the business depression.

At another point in the city today, numerous minor candidates on the Democratic ticket, many State officials and several political leaders gathered at the call of Harry Lalb, chairman of the Democratic State central committee for Baltimore City. The meeting was held behind closed doors, but it was understood all were told that every effort must be made to assure the reelection of Gov. Ritchie and the success of the entire Democratic State ticket in the November election.

Returned From Baltimore for Hearing in Two Holdups.

Sam Berlin, suspected participant in depredations of the "tri-State" gang, was committed to the District Jail yesterday to await trial on two robbery indictments.

Berlin was arrested several weeks ago in Baltimore. He was brought here yesterday following extradition proceedings. Police said Berlin was a suspect in the holdup of a local brewery and robbery of a mail convoy at Union Station last year. He is under indictment on both counts, police said.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, detective chief, said Berlin held only "temporary" membership in the "tri-State" gang.

"The brewery and Union Station jobs were his only activities with the mob," Burke said.

Francis White, mail guard, shot during the Union Station holdup, is still in Providence Hospital. Complications from a bullet wound in the leg have kept him under care of physicians for more than 11 months.

Escaped Gangsters' Lawyer Quits Case

Richmond, Oct. 2 (AP).—Charles W. Moss, attorney for Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, gangsters who shot their way out of Richmond City Jail, has washed his hands of the case.

"By their desperate, cold-blooded conduct, to which I was a witness at the jail, I feel I am relieved of any obligation to act as their counsel," Moss said. "I am through with the case."

Moss had defended the two gangsters, convicted of the holdup murder of E. M. Huband, Federal Reserve truck driver, here last March. The attorney was present in the jail Saturday when Mais and Legenza drew their smuggled pistols and shot down three officers in their break for freedom.

Police, who have searched Virginia and neighboring States, are so far without definite traces of the gangsters.

Police Grill 14 in Death Of Virginian

Jealousy Held Motive After Ill Feeling Is Reported.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Sifting the stories of 14 persons held here, Harrisonburg police tonight indicated they were near establishing the identity of the man who shot down Gleaves Calhoun, 27, in front of a home early Sunday.

The latest additions to the jail colony are Frank Conley, 19, of Hopkins Gap, West Rockingham, a CCC member, and Walker Berry, of Harrisonburg. Both are believed to have been at the party at the home of Mrs. Kirby Lam, in front of which the shooting occurred. Many of those held are from the Hopkins Gap section. Several others who were at the party are sought.

Chief of Police Hillyer Boice said all of those in jail will be held as material witnesses until there is a definite turn in the case, the first of its kind in Harrisonburg in two decades. He would not say whether he thought the guilty person was among those held.

Reports are current that the automatic pistol used by the assailant had been found but police would not confirm this.

Police are confident that jealousy was the motive, having learned there was ill-feeling among some of those at the party.

Body Is Identified.

Tappahannock, Va., Oct. 2 (AP).—A body found on the shore of the Rappahannock River about 20 miles above here yesterday was identified today as that of Henry Gardner, who shipped from Baltimore on a vessel loading lumber for Leedstown wharf.

Allegany Laws On Liquor Hit

County's Set-up Must Be Changed, Judge Lindley Sloan Asserts.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 2 (Spl.). Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, in his charge to the grand jury at the opening of the October term of the Allegany County Circuit Court yesterday, criticized the weakness and inequalities of the Allegany County liquor law, which, he said, must be changed by the next Legislature.

He declared that under the present law the court was forced to act as a liquor licensing board, which he termed a nonjudicial function.

The issuance of nearly 200 beer and wine licenses had been a matter of serious concern to the court, the judge stated. He said that the sale of beer with food had been flagrantly violated on Sundays. He cited an instance where on the purchase of a bag of potato chips as food served with beer, a group of men bought and drank a case of beer at one resort.

Judge Sloan recommended that the law be changed so that the sale of beer, wine and liquor would be forbidden on Sundays. He said that some beer licensees, in order to draw trade, had set up dance halls in outlying sections where there is no police protection.

Job Bureau Will Remain In Annapolis

Inaction on Change for Present Assured by Gov. Ritchie.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Activities of the Federal employment bureau at Annapolis will not be transferred to Hyattsville, as the center for southern Maryland, at least for the present, it was announced today after Gov. Ritchie had conferred with Employment Commissioner Oliver C. Short and representatives of several civic organizations, who launched a strong protest move.

The proposed consolidation was made known by Commissioner Short Thursday, and the date fixed for closing the local office was October 11. This brought a storm of protest from Annapolis and Anne Arundel County organizations. Appeals were wired to President Roosevelt, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Maryland's representation in Congress, in addition to laying the case before Gov. Ritchie.

The fact that public works projects approximating $3,000,000 in and around Annapolis furnished the main basis of the protests. Gov. Ritchie, after investigating the situation, among other things said:

"I am glad to inform the people of Anne Arundel County that no action will be taken toward the proposed consolidation, for the time being at least, and the people may rest assured that if the question of removing the offices from this county arises again, ample advance notice will be given and a full opportunity for a hearing accorded all who may be interested."

Husband Charged With Firing Home

Held After Being Accused by Estranged Wife.

Middletown, Md., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—William Clark, 28, of Petersville, is in the Frederick County Jail on default of $1,000 bail awaiting action of the grand jury, charged with attempting to burn down the two-story frame house occupied by his estranged wife and infant child near Petersville.

Mrs. Clark testified last night at the hearing before Justice Jones at Brunswick that she saw her husband walk from the road to the rear of the house and later emerge from the cellar and quickly disappear. Entering the cellar she found a bunch of rags and some paper blazing furiously, licking the woodwork of the house. The rags and paper had been saturated with coal oil from a can nearby.

Mrs. Clark gathered up the blazing rags and paper and dumped them into a small stream near the house. She then drove three miles to Brunswick and notified Chief of Police William E. Chew, owner of the property, who made the arrest.

Woodstock, Va., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—"Kid" Emsweller, well-known boxer in the Valley, was sentenced to serve one year on the State roads and fined $250 by Justice M. L. Walton, jr., in the county trial justice court here for punching H. J. Wetzel, policeman, at Mount Jackson Saturday night.

After Emsweller had purchased goods at a restaurant in Mount Jackson and refused to pay, Wetzel was called by the management and was struck on the face and knocked to the floor, witnesses said. Emsweller was "floored" when the officer hit him with a blackjack, it was said.

According to Wetzel, the boxer regained his senses and again put up a battle on the way to Woodstock.

Tydings Holds To Party Ties

Baltimore, Oct. 2 (AP).—Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, said today a citation by the Republican Senatorial-Congressional Committee for a speech warning against the piling up of appropriations did not keep him from being a Democrat.

Tydings was asked how it felt to be decorated by the Republican group in a pamphlet attacking the Roosevelt Administration. He replied that it was hardly becoming for a man who has been decorated to comment on the decoration or the reasons for it.

"I have made some speeches criticizing some measures and some speeches supporting other measures. I have not thought that I was sent to Washington to be a rubber stamp for anybody."

A number of prominent Democrats in addition to Tydings were decorated by the Republican committee. Among them were Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis, nominees for president in 1928 and 1924, respectively, Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia, and others.

G.O.P. Policy 'Picayunish,' Ritchie Says

Defends Administration Before Democratic Women's Group.

Baltimore, Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Branding the Republican State platform as "picayunish," Gov. Albert C. Ritchie today stoutly defended his administration of Maryland in a speech before members of the Democratic Women's Luncheon Club at the Hotel Emerson.

The Governor declared that "the Republican platform strikes me as being made up largely of picayunish propaganda designed to catch little groups of voters in this section and that section of the city and State."

He added that the Democratic platform, on the other hand, is "absolutely sound," and is based only on fundamental things "which our party can honestly promise and fulfill."

Another speaker was George L. Radcliffe, candidate for the United States Senate on the Democratic ticket. He declared the election of President Roosevelt was the most fortunate thing that ever happened to this country, and he pointed out that various political experiments must be tried before the Nation can emerge from the business depression.

At another point in the city today, numerous minor candidates on the Democratic ticket, many State officials and several political leaders gathered at the call of Harry Laib, chairman of the Democratic State central committee for Baltimore City. The meeting was held behind closed doors, but it was understood all were told that every effort must be made to assure the reelection of Gov. Ritchie and the success of the entire Democratic State ticket in the November election.

Kearney Rates Tigers and Cardinals Even Money in Opener Today

Happy Go, 75-1 Shot, Second By 3-4 Length; Six Choices Triumph

By Walter Haight.

CARRYING Jockey Jimmy Hunter and enough lead to make weight 130 pounds, George D. Widener's Sation yesterday sprinted to victory in the $2,500 added Capital Handicap, the opening day feature at nearby Laurel.

Moving up in the stretch, Sation disposed of Happy Go, the early pace-setter, and Only One. The gelded son of Galetian and Salacia ran the 6 furlongs in 1:11 2-5, just a fifth of a second off the track record held by Mr. Sponge and over a course that horsemen had complained was slow despite the dry weather.

The month-long meeting opened under ideal conditions. A warm sun and a cool breeze battled to a draw as more than 7,000 welcomed the bangtails to the Baltimore Boulevard course.

Six Choices Win.

Six favorites triumphed and only a scattering of good place and show prices was left for the longshot players.

The feature was delayed for more than seven minutes while Starter Milton tried all the tricks of his trade in an effort to achieve an alignment. When they were away, Happy Go, a 75-1 shot, popped out in front and fairly ate up the ground. Sation was in close attendance and apparently under a pull from Jockey Hunter.

With the last eighth of a mile reached, Hunter shook up Sation and the Widener color bearer bounded away from Happy Go to win by three parts of a length in the ensuing drive. Only One, a slow starter, was third, another half length away.

Pays $5.40 Mutuel.

Sation, the 1933 sprint champion and used to carrying top weight, was heavily supported in the mutuels and paid $5.40. Kawagoe, his stablemate, was never prominent.

Jockey Eddie Litzenberger rode his first race of the Maryland fall season and bounced home with a winner. It was Black Rose, of the favored La Boyteaux entry, which had a length advantage over Diverting and another length over Sastar. The last named set the early pace, followed by Black Rose. It was all over in the stretch, when Litzenberger turned his mount loose. Black Rose ran the 5½ furlongs in 1:07 2-5 and, coupled with Airatrix, paid a $5.90 mutuel.

Cadescent Winner.

The boos rent the air at the finish of the second race when Cadescent was ruled a nose winner over Jack Low with Sang Froid third. It was a close one, but those in the clubhouse at the angle favoring Cadescent were wondering at those in the stands who thought Jack Low had won. However, Jack Low was finishing much the faster and doubtless would have won in another stride. Cadescent was clocked in 1:13 and was an odds-on choice at $3.80.

Much happened in the Potomac Steeplechase before Lord Johnson was declared the winner. Wrackon, setting a nice pace, lost his rider, and the longshot players moaned. Blackcock, the favorite, ran out at the clubhouse turn the second time around and the favorite players moaned. Lord Johnson and Spinach, fighting it out, bobbled at the thirteenth fence, but held their balance to finish one, two. Rozell staggered into third money. In the meanwhile, Mr. R. D. Young brought Blackcock back on the course and took fourth money. Lord Johnson, a luke-warm second choice, paid a $6.80 mutuel.

Go Quick Takes Fourth.

George D. Widener's Go Quick, made the favorite, came romping home in the fourth race, but only after a nip and tuck battle with Pretty Night. The latter stumbled slighly at the furlong pole and was unable to make up the distance lost by this mishap. Scatter Brain took third money. The winner was the third favorite of the day to score and paid $4.70.

Eddie Litzenberger rode his second winner of the day on Main Chance in the fifth race. He rated his mount behind the pace set by Ashen and then went on barely to outlast Gold and Black in a sizzling stretch duel. Litzenberger outrode Gilbert in the final drive. Rebel Yell, a prominent factor all the way, was a tiring third. The winner was the fourth favorite to score and rewarded with a $4.20 pay-off.

Flagstone, with Bobby Merritt in the saddle, raced to a decision over Infinate and Unencumbered over the mile and a sixteenth course.

The finale went to Xandra in a drive with Olamay and Resurrection.

"Blondy" Ryan Marries.

Diana Fishwick Is Defeated by Unknown

16-Year-Old Girl Upsets Star; Miss Van Wie and Mrs. Vare Triumph.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2 (AP).—The British Lion on the Union Jack flying above the Whitemarsh Valley County Club roared with pain today as all but one member of John Bull's Curtis Cup team was evicted from the thirty-eighth Women's National Golf Championship.

While Wanda Morgan, 1931 English women's champion, remained the sole survivor of the foreign challenge, six of the American cupsters, reached the third round. Their three youngest teammates fell by the wayside.

Golden-haired Diana Fishwick, 1931 British champion and the most feared of the British Empire invasion, was side-tracked in the second round in a stunning surprise sprung by the husky 16-year-old Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco.

Defeats Her Captain.

Miss Fishwick had scored in the morning round over her compatriot, Doris Chambers, nonplaying captain of the British team, 2 up, and was generally expected to make short work of the youthful Californian.

Starting off with pars, however, Miss Traung quickly ran up a lead of 2 up through the third and maintained it the rest of the way out, reaching the turn in 42 to the Briton's 44.

They halved the tenth, and Miss Traung, displaying a remarkable coolness for a youngster playing in her first National tournament, carved out a creditable par on the long, uphill eleventh to go 3 up as Miss Fishwick dumped her wood second into a trap. Miss Traung steered her tee shot into a trap to lose the short twelfth, but she proved the steadier when their drives were trapped on the fifteenth and came out with a winning par 4.

Diana Plumpton Loses.

Betty Jameson, 15-year-old Dallas holder of the Southern championship, defeated Diana Plumpton, of England, 3 and 2, in the first round, but the plump Texas youngster's victory spell was short-lived.

Miss Van Wie had some anxious moments during her morning triumph of 3 and 1 over Mrs. J. L. Walsh, of Philadelphia, but settled in her stride and took full opportunity of Miss Jameson's complete collapse to vanquish her, 8 and 7.

Credit for the elimination of the fourth Briton went to Mrs. R. C. Lake, of New York, who, as Marion Turpie, won the Southern championship several years ago. Mrs. Lake conquered Betty Pietsch, of Port Chester, N. Y., and then humbled Molly Gourlay, of England, 3 and 2. Miss Gourlay previously had taken the measure of Mrs. Mon Reid, of Cincinnati, 4 and 3.

The advance of the six older American team players found Glenna Collett Vare, five times former champion; Mrs. Leona Cheney, of San Gabriel, Calif.; Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City veteran; Charlotte Glutting, South Orange, N. J., as well as Miss Van Wie, winning with ease in comparison with the struggle Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., had before she disposed of Estelle Lawson, of Raleigh, N. C., former holder of the North and South Carolina State championships, in the second round.

Walter Johnson Picks Tigers If Pitching Staff Holds Up

DETROIT, Oct. 2 (AP).—Here's how some of baseball's outstanding figures and leaders size up the prospects of the Cardinals and Tigers in the world series:

Commissioner Landis—"I'm no prophet. I wouldn't be a bit surprised either way the outcome swings. There hasn't been a series in years where both clubs presented so many colorful players."

John A. Heydler, president of the National League—"The Cardinals proved the best in our league in that exciting stretch drive and we have every reason to feel confident of winning the world championship again."

William Harridge, president of the American League—"I can not underestimate the strength of the Cardinals and the wonderful Dean brothers, but we feel Detroit has shown ability to meet every emergency on the ball field this season and will give a splendid account of itself. Mickey Cochrane is a wonderfully aggressive leader."

Walter Johnson, manager of Cleveland Indians: "These Tigers will hit the Deans or anybody else who pitches for the Cardinals, but the question is how their own pitching will hold up. I look for Al Crowder and Tommy Bridges to come through, if Schoolboy Rowe doesn't."

Rogers Hornsby, manager of St. Louis Browns: "It looks like a prolonged battle to me. Both clubs are plenty tough and it's just a question of how good these Deans are."

Donie Bush, manager of Minneapolis A. A. Club: "I like the Tigers, despite the fact these Cardinals have finished the season in top form. Rowe has the stuff to outpitch either Dean and Detroit has more punch right down the batting order."

World Series Fans May Eat 48,000 'Hot Dogs' at Detroit

DETROIT, Oct. 2 (U.P.)—The weiner vendors of Navin Field—inside the ball park and out—were all set tonight to ring up a $100,000 world series food bill.

Charles Jacobs, manager of the concession on the field, started out with an initial purchase of three tons of peanuts. Then he bought 48,000 frankfurters and 48,000 rolls.

"In cool weather we sell at least a hot dog for every person in the park," he said. Bleachers have raised Navin Field's seating capacity to 47,000 so Jacobs can accommodate 1,000 extra hungry fans in tomorrow's opening game.

The concessioner also put in 5,000 pounds of hamburger, 1,000 pounds of coffee, several truck loads of beer and almost a ton of pretzels.

"One out of five drinks coffee in chilly weather," Jacobs pointed out. "One in every six buys a hamburger. Ice cream and soft drinks sales jump with warmer weather."

The neighborhood grocery and cigar store, too, stocked up for the rush of trade. Whole families were busy. They hoped to see the St. Louis Cardinals and Tigers play the full seven games, four of them in Detroit.

Home owners near the park also hoped to profit. Wooden fences have fallen and new parking lots have sprung up by the dozens in former vacant yards and private driveways.

Indiana U.'s Plays Trouble Ohio State

Varsity Is Held to Three Touchdowns in Drill

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 2 (AP).—Ohio State's varsity had a particularly tough time tonight scrimmaging against a reserve team equipped with Indiana formations, but Jack Smith, Frank Boucher and John Kabealo managed to get across with touchdowns. Boucher's was on a 55-yard run around end. Smith suffered an injured knee, but it was not thought serious enough to keep him out of Saturday's game with Indiana.

The reserves gained against the varsity and, although they failed to score, distracted Coach Francis Schmidt so much he didn't pay a whit of attention to 200 freshmen, who reported for the first day's practice of the yearling squad.

Dizzy Pulls New One—Ruins Tiger Practice With His Hits!

By Paul Gallico.

DETROIT, Oct. 2.—The stage for what probably will be the nuttiest and most brilliant world series in baseball history was set at Navin Field at noon today when Mr. Jerome Dean, otherwise known as Dizzy, arrived in the ball yard with the rest of the St. St. Louis Cardinals.

You know this young man as Dizzy. His name is listed as Jerome H., and actually he was christened Jay Hanna Dean. But down in Holdenville, Okla. (one of the three listed birthplaces of Dizzy), the Deans had a very good friend and the friend had a fine boy whose name was Jerome H. This boy died and the father grieved dreadfully over the loss of his son. And so Dizzy went over one day and said: "Looka, I want to do something for you and for that poor kid, too. I'll make that name of Jerome H. famous." And so Jay Hanna Dean became Jerome H. Dean. It was a sweet, naive and rather beautiful gesture. So the world calls him Dizzy.

Tossed by Fischer.

As Dizzy arrived, the Tigers were just finishing their work-out, and Carl Fischer, who had been pitching to the last batters, was still on the mound. The park and the space around the diamond was full of newspapermen and photographers. Before anyone knew what was going on, Dizzy, wearing a chocolate brown suit, his brown hair falling in a cowlick over his pale and somewhat drawn face, was standing at the plate with a fungo bat on his shoulder.

There was a cheer from the assembled reporters and ball players and a wild yell from the photographers. Here was manna from heaven beyond their wildest dreams. For a moment all you could hear was the snapping of shutters and the grinding of movie cameras, as Fischer burned them over, and the Dizzy Dean slashed hits right and left with the light one-hand bat. "Put 'em over," he kept shouting—"boy, I like to hit. Stick it right in there, boy. Whang! How's that? That's where I like 'em."

Warned By Dazzy.

As he warmed up to the fun he took his coat off, and stood there in vest and shirt and trousers and street shoes. Old Dazzy Vance, former star Brooklyn pitcher, shouted, "Don't show 'em all your stuff, Diz * * *" as the mad and happy Dean lined out hit after hit. "You're showing 'em your strength. Miss a couple."

Some of the Tigers watched popeyed. The cameramen snapped their lenses ecstatically on this weird scene. "Boy, ah sure love to hit," said Dean again. It ended only when the light fungo bat split at the handle. By this time all the Tigers had vanished from the scene. The Cardinals filed down the dugout steps and into the dressing room. There, Paul and Dizzy seized one another and did a strange, elemental ceremonial dance, vaguely reminiscent of the early American Indian, while the rest of the team supplied the music, an old Gregorian chant entitled "Hold that Tiger."

If the Cards were suffering any strain from their great stretch run to the pennant you couldn't notice it.

Fans Converge On Detroit for Series Start

Betting Favors Cards.

Despite reports of even money, the invaders ruled the betting choice to win four out of the seven games, at odds ranging from 5 to 4 to 4 to 3—a tribute not only to the Deans but to the gallant manner in which the Cardinals annihilated the lead of the Giants in those hectic last days of the season.

Speculation tonight chiefly concerned the pitching choices of Mickey Cochrane and Frankie Frisch. Both declined to name a definite choice.

Late today, Cochrane did break his silence with the admission that Alvin Crowder would go to the mound for the Tigers tomorrow—if Dizzy Dean was the nominee of Frisch. But beyond that, he would give no inkling of his pitching plans.

The natural assumption that Cochrane and Frisch would start their respective aces, Schoolboy Rowe and Dizzy Dean, tonight was believed by baseball men to be illogical. The elder of the Deans, overworked in the final days of the campaign, has had but two days' rest, compared to Rowe's easy task after the Tigers clinched the pennant two weeks ago.

May Not Start Dizzy.

Thus it was believed that Frisch would forego Dizzy Dean as his opening choice, relying tomorrow on one of two alternates. These, in the order of their probability, were diminutive "Wild Bill" Hallahan, veteran of many world series battles, and Paul "Daffy" Dean, who has had one day more of rest than his more distinguished brother.

Cochrane's statement that he would not start Rowe against Dizzy Dean is taken to mean that the Tiger pilot will not waste Rowe's pitching against the only Cardinal hurler who figures to beat him. Hence, his choice of Crowder, erstwhile Nat, if Frisch should send the elder of the Deans to the mound.

But boiled down, tomorrow's pitching prospects were Schoolboy Rowe vs. "Wild Bill" Hallahan.

Detroit fandom, unlike all Gaul, tonight is divided into only two parts—those who have their series tickets and those who have none. The 47,000 capacity of Navin Field is woefully inadequate for the more than 200,000 ticket seekers and speculators are asking, and getting, $25 each for the $3.50 pavilion seats.

Cardinals Work Out.

The Cardinals lost little time today in journeying to Navin Field for a pre- es workout at the scene of operations. Manager Frisch sent his stars, the Dean boys, Pepper Martin, Virgil Davis, Leo Durocher, Jim Collins, through their paces, the hitters getting the range of the Navin Field ramparts against right-handed pitching, for the Tigers will rely exclusively on right-handers.

Matching managerial wits in this world series will be two veterans of a grist of world series games—both playing pilots—Frisch and Cochrane. Detroit is looking to the idolized Mickey and his boundless energy to keep his Tigers keyed to the pitch they maintained through their American League campaign. From behind the bat he will direct the strategy of Detroit.

From his infield post at second base, Frisch will guide the destinies of the Cardinals. Not unlike Cochrane, a dashing bundle of energy and nerve himself, Frisch will provide for the Cardinals an inspiring leadership, asking them to do little that he can not do himself.

Tigers Heavy Hitters.

Detroit is awaiting the answer to the one issue on which this world series is supposed to revolve: Can the Dean brothers, with a bit of help from their pitching mates, subdue the power that lurks in the Tigers' bats? For the Tigers, despite the position as shortenders, are easily recognized as the harder-hitting club, with a team batting average of an even .300 as compared to the Cardinals' .288.

The Cardinals will have none to match the slugging of big Hank Greenberg and Charley Gehringer, whose lofty batting averages aided in lifting Detroit to the pennant, nor do they have a single player with the home-run hitting prowess of Goose Goslin, and therein hang the hopes of Detroit fans, for, defensively, the clubs are reckoned on a par.

Detroit was looking, too, to the possibility that Pepper Martin, the Athletics' scourge of the 1931 series and Catcher Cochrane's pet enemy on the base paths, would provide the same glittering baseball pyrotechnics that marked his first world series assignment when he batted an even .500 and stole eight bases to set a new world series record.

Detroiter Wins Match From Mrs. Faunce

Washington Contender in National Tourney Eliminated, 6-5.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2 (AP).—Winifred Faunce, of Norbeck, Md., Washington district's lone qualifier in the National women's golf championship, was eliminated today by a 6 and 5 defeat at the hands of Mrs. H. G. Higbie, Detroit.

Mrs. Higbie had a winning margin of 6 up at turn, increased it to 7 at the tenth, dropped the 470-yard eleventh, and held her own for the next two holes.

Wins Only Two Holes.

Miss Faunce won only two holes—the second and the eleventh, taking second with par 4 after her opponent was trapped with an approach shot and took 5, and winning the eleventh with 6, when the Detroiter lost 1 stroke in the rough and 3-putted on the green.

The Marylander's drive on the opening hole went into the trap midway to the green, and before she holed out she had 6. A slice to the right into the rough cost her the third, and when she 3-putted the fourth green she lost that hole.

The fifth and sixth also went to Mrs. Higbie, as Miss Faunce's errors caused her score to mount over par on each. They halved the seventh in par 5s, but Miss Faunce proceeded to go 5 down at the eighth, when her iron second dropped into a trap.

She lost two strokes to par on the short ninth through faulty putting, and Mrs. Higbie went 7 up at the tenth, when the Maryland contender's drive bounded into a rough. Miss Faunce was on in 4.

After Miss Faunce won the eleventh, they halved the remaining two holes, at 4-6, losing a stroke to par on the twelfth and 2 strokes on the thirteenth.

Highest Batting Mark.

The highest team hitting average, believe it or not, was compiled away back in 1910 in the era of the dead ball, by the Philadelphia Athletics against the Cubs. The A's hit for a series average of .317. The Giants hold the mark for National League clubs. They hit .309 against the Yankees in 1922.

Davidson, N. C., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—The Davidson College Wildcats took a hard workout here this afternoon in preparation for the game with Army Saturday. The Presbyterians have only one more practice period before they leave for West Point Thursday afternoon.

DETROIT, Oct. 2 (AP).—Odds of 15 to 1 and 8 to 1, respectively, against the Detroit Tigers or St. Louis Cardinals winning the world series in four straight games were offered today by Tom Kearney, veteran St. Louis betting commissioner.

Kearney made the Cardinals 7 to 10 favorites to win the series, and offered even money against Detroit.

Other odds quoted by Kearney included: 7 to 1 the Tigers do not win the first three games, and 5 to 1 against the Cardinals; 3 to 1 the Tigers do not win the first two games, and 2 to 1 against the Cardinals; 4 to 5 on the first game, the bettor to take his pick; 3 to 1 the Tigers do not win any three games the bettor designated, and 2 to 1 against the Cardinals.

Meanwhile, Manager Mickey Cochrane of the Tigers expressed confidence he and his mates would come through the series with flying colors.

"The Cardinals look to be tougher opposition than the Giants might have furnished," Cochrane admitted. "But what's the difference otherwise? It's still just a set of ball games and we're ready to tackle nything the other fellows has to offer. We haven't been frightened by anybody so far this year and I'm confident the Tigers will rise again to a big occasion."

Looking back to the double victory this Detroit outfit scored against the Yankees before a capacity crowd of nearly 80,000 in the Yankee Stadium, it is impossible to disagree with Cochrane and Tiger partisans that the American League champions have the stuff to come through under fire.

Have Edge at Bat.

Man for man, outside of pitching, they have an edge in speed and batting power over the Cardinals. Behind the bat, in their dynamic manager, they are fortified for any contingency as well as for able handling of a flinging staff featuring Rowe, Crowder and Tommy Bridges.

The big question resolves around what these Tiger sluggers will do against the most potent pitching pair baseball has known since the palmy days of Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw of the last championship Athletics. It can be answered only by what takes place on the ball fields, rather than by any incoherent debate in the swirling hotel lobbies tonight.

Meanwhile, the baseball issue of the day has appeared to grip popular imagination and interest more briskly than any world championship since 1924 when the great Walter Johnson emerged from the shadows to pitch the Washington Nationals to triumph over the New York Giants.

Complete Sell-Out.

For the first two games scheduled here tomorrow and Thursday, as well as any subsequent continuation of the battle in the world's motor car capital, Navin Field is a complete sell-out so far as reserved seats are concerned. Bleacher lines started forming early tonight outside the park, where some 20,000 will be admitted at $1.10 per head tomorrow morning.

After two games here, the warring forces move to the old familiar battleground of Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, where the Cardinals clinched their 1931 victory over the Athletics in the series featuring the wild domp of Pepper Martin, now the third baseman of the Red Birds and the lead-off man in tomorrow's opening skirmish. Three games are scheduled in St. Louis, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, after which the teams return to Detroit if necessary to decide the winner. The series is on the best-four-out-of-seven basis, and it shapes up as a battle that may well go the limit.

First Touchdown Made After Punt Return in First Period.

By John R. Vosburgh.

SCRAPPY little St. John's Prep battled Central High's unnumbered legions all over the lot in Central Stadium yesterday before the city's high school champions finally pulled out a 13-to-0 victory, their first in three starts.

Apparently unaffected from the 27-to-0 beating received Friday from Western, the Johnnies proceeded to fight for every inch of ground so effectively that they stopped the Central running attack dead in its tracks at several critical sages.

Central finally had to take to the air for both its touchdowns. The Mount Pleasanters had the ball taken away from them on downs early in the second quarter after penetrating to the St. John's 4-yard line. The Johnnies kicked out of danger and Central found itself back on the 20-yard line after Quarter Back Don Dunlap had returned the punt 12 yards.

Caught Over Line.

The Central field general then took to the air. His pass to his right end, Charlie Kline, fell beyond the latter's outstretched hands in the end zone, but Dunlap came back on the next play to shoot a beauty to the same receiver, who caught it just over the line. Dunlap drop-kicked perfectly for the extra point.

The same passing combination was forced to go into action for the other Central score. Central had reached its opponents' 12-yard line early in the last period, but St. John's threw big Norman Sabatini for a 3-yard loss. Dunlap then backed up to his 25 and passed a sizzler to Kline, who nabbed the ball on the 1-yard line and fell into the end zone.

St. John's offensive bogged down on two occasions after negotiating into scoring territory. In the fourth quarter, it was stopped twice for no gain on the 4-yard line and Vermillion of Central intercepted a pass on third down.

Coach Coggins used his second team fo the greater portion of the third quarter. St. John's was handicapped by the absence of Bob Barrett, its triple-threat back, with the exception of a few minutes in the second and fourth periods, when he went in in a pass-throwing capacity.

St. John's threatened shortly after the opening kick-off. After gaining 20 yards on an exchange of kicks. Mike Simone, St. John's quarter back, took a pass on Eastern's 38 from Schead and staggered to the 24. Central ended the drive, however, and took the ball on downs.

Central Starts March.

Dunlap's second scoring pass came after Central had marched from its own 35. A pass to Whedon knocked off 18. Jones and Dunlap alternated in carrying the ball to the St. John's 27, and a pass from Dunlap to Jones accounted for 15 more. After Sabatini was thrown back, Dunlap backed up to his 25 and passed to Kline.

Simone returned the kick-off 25 yards to midfield. Barrett passed to Walton on Eastern's 35. Simone went off his left tackle and reversed his field to the 17-yard line. A pass to Simone took the ball to the 10-yard stripe and a penalty advanced it 5 more. St. John's could gain only a yard, however, and Barrett's third down pass was intercepted by Vermillion, who sprinted to the St. John's 20-yard line.

Cochrane's Town Wished for Giants

It's Merely a Matter of Traveling Expenses.

Bridgewater, Mass., Oct. 2 (AP).—Gordon Cochrane's old home town wishes the New York Giants had won the National League pennant.

The boys here haven't a thing against the Cardinals and they're not afraid of the Dean brothers, but it's merely a matter of railroad fares and traveling expenses.

Bridgewater, with its 9,000 residents, knows "Kid" Cochrane, admires him, and wants to see him lead his Tigers to the championship. The folks here don't call him "Mickey."

The parents of the Detroit manager, Mr. and Mrs. John Cochrane, and a younger brother, Archie, headed for Tigertown Sunday. Behind they left only Archie's wife and baby daughter. Louise Ceasani, a friend of the family, also went along with them.

Officials Rule Out Pop Bottles

Virginia Board May Take Action Against Fans.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 2 (AP).—Virginia sports fans, if they should be overcome by a surge of enthusiasm, will not have an opportunity to use beverage bottles as missiles, if the State Boxing and Wrestling Commission can prevent it.

Meeting here last night the commission decided to stiffen its enforcement of regulations covering boxing and wrestling shows in the State and particularly to remind concessionnaires that selling bottled drinks at arenas is not permitted. Beverages dispensed must be in paper cups.

The commission issued a license to the Chesapeake Amateur Athletic Club of Leesville, which plans to put on a boxing or wrestling show once a week. Thomas C. Slaughter is president of this club.

It was ruled also that all amateur boxers who wish to participate in shows in Virginia must register with the Amateur Athletic Union or some other recognized National organization of this kind.

'He's Good—and Not Dizzy—Because He's Got A Good Manager: Me,' Declares Mrs. J. Dean

"Easiest Man in the World to Manage," She Says of Famous Mate.

DETROIT, Oct. 2 (AP).—Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, take it from Mrs. Jerome Dean, is the "easiest person in the world to manage," and he's not "dizzy."

Mrs. Dean said so today as she arrived in Detroit with her famous husband, who is expected to play quite an important part in the world series opening Wednesday between the high-flying Cardinals and the fighting Detroit Tigers.

Has a Real Manager.

Stepping from the train which brought the National League champions to Detroit, Mrs. Dean explained just why the elder half of the two-man family pitching staff is getting along in this baseball world—he has a real manager.

"He's the easiest person in the world to manage," Mrs. Dean smiled. "I handle the money and all I say is 'Jerome, we'll not buy this, it is too expensive.' He agrees just like that. Anything is all right with him. That's why I'm his banker, his bookkeeper, his manager and his girl friend."

The Deans have been married three years, having met in Houston, Tex., where Mrs. Dean managed a department in a store.

Nickname a Mystery.

Where did Dizzy get his nickname? "I don't know; it was something baseball just pinned on him," says Mrs. Dean. "As I've said many a time, it's the last name in the world he should have if they went in for appropriate handles."

What about her husband pitching the first game of the series? Mrs. Dean feels that "even a fellow like Dizzy can't go on pitching all the time" and might need a rest.

"He doesn't worry about the series," Mrs. Dean said. "This morning I asked him that question and his answer was 'well—they will be just two more ball games as far as I'm concerned.'"

Dizzy has been sitting in Manager Frisch's lap, figuratively, ever since he clinched the pennant for the Cards Sunday with his second shutout of the Reds in two days, pleading for the right to start the opening series game tomorrow. Frisch won't tell him yes, definitely. Meanwhile he's dying several slow deaths in his anxiety for the word.

"I want at 'em," he said, "right away. That Rowe is taller than me, I guess, but I'm the best pitcher."

"He owes me two bucks," Diz insisted.

So he saw the man, returned with $1 cash and a check for $1,500 for his share of the tour, and a promise of the other dollar.

"I know it's a good check," he insisted. "This fellow's all right. He said he'd give me a check on any bank I wanted to name, so I picked my own."

Griffith Seeking Browns' Pitcher

Holds Three Conferences With Hornsby.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—Owner Clark Griffith, of the Nats, and Manager Hornsby, of the Browns, went into three separate and distinct huddles at odd times today, foreshadowing a trade between the two clubs.

Griffith is bent on snatching a pitcher from the Browns, with the probability that the object of his aims is Irving Hadley or George Blaeholder, what with the Nats needing pitchers like Frisch needs the Dean boys.

Hornsby is equally intent on surrounding himself with a young ball club next season, but the lack of promising youngsters on the Washington club has thus far balked a trade. A deal is expected before the end of the world series.

World Series Side Lights

Dazzy Vance Finally Gets in Classic After Waiting for 13 Years; Scalpers Reported Asking as Much as $25 a Ticket.

DETROIT, Oct. 2 (AP).—The hotel lobby was packed with baseball celebrities, here for the world series. Bell boys rushed madly about, autograph seekers pushed and tugged breathlessly to get Dizzy Dean's singature and, on some overstuffed chairs, as many as a dozen tried to get some rest.

"It took me 13 years to get in and now I'm just a relief pitcher," sighed the old dazzler, "but I sneaked in just the same. No. 13 always has been lucky for me anyway. I pitched my only one-hit game against the Phillies on September 13, 1925. And, in my thirteenth year, I escaped from Cincinnati into the world series dough!"

Confusion was a mild word for it all tonight as excited Detroit steamed up for the big show. Although the seating capacity of Navin Field is 47,000 with the extra seats and camp chairs, it was estimated that 150,000 fans were looking feverishly for tickets. Police keep strict watch for scalpers, who were reported demanding as much as $25 a ticket for the opener.

Thomas M. Rowe, of El Dorado, Ark., father of Detroit's famous "Schoolboy" Rowe, was on the scene early with his daughter, Mrs. Irene Slade, of Kilgore, Tex. "Yep, the Dean boys are tough, but Schoolboy will take 'em," he predicted. "Paw" Rowe made the trip by bus.

They told this one on a Detroit police squad today: The chief last night ordered a detail to the Wabash Station to guard "those Cardinals." But when the St. Louis players arrived, not a cop noticed them. They expected real Cardinals, red hats and all.

Stories were as numerous as fans today as the players, writers and managers of other major and minor league clubs swapped experiences, but the one that drew the biggest laugh was told by Dazzy Vance.

"An umpire had made a close decision," related Dazzy, "and the batter, called out on the play, stormed at him. Unmoved, the ump stood there grandly with his arms stretched in the air.

"Hey," yelled the batter, "put your hands down. You're the burglar; not me!"

Winston Guest Star in Polo Victory

Scores 11 Goals, Templeton Swamping Eastcott by 22-5 Count.

Guest, playing in the same brilliant form he exhibited in the recent East-West series, scored 11 goals from his No. 2 position. Mike Phipps, another member of the victorious Eastern team, counted seven goals at No. 1. Stewart Iglehart, at No. 3, and Raymond Guest at back, each scored two goals.

Eastcott's attack was stopped consistently by the brilliant defense of Iglehart and Ray Guest and the losers never were in the running at any time. C. V. Whitney counted two goals for Eastcott, while Stephen Sanford and the Hoppings, Earle A. S. and Earl W., each scored one.

Tomorrow the defending Aurora array will meet Greentree in the other semifinal.

Brother Elmer, Peanut Vendor, To Stay at Home

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 2 (AP).—All those so-and-so things which Elmer (Goober) Dean said about St. Louis not so long ago still stands and it can have the world series along with his two pitching brothers, "Dizzy" and Paul—but he will not be there.

Elmer, who sells goobers, alias peanuts, during the Texas League season at the Houston ball park, went to St. Louis recently in search of the fame which has greeted his brothers. But someone upset his plans to hawk his trade there. Reports even had it that "Dizzy" and Paul frowned on the idea. So back he went, saying blankety-blank words about St. Louis—and here he stays, world series or what have you.

Navy Installs New Signal System

Three Variations of Plan to Be Used Saturday Against Virginia.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 2 (Spl.).—When Navy and Virginia come to grips at Griffith Stadium, Washington, Saturday, the Cavaliers will be confronted with at least two perplexing situations.

One is the direction of plays under a newly installed signal-calling system, and the fact that the famed Notre Dame shift and general style of attack, in vogue last season, has practically been junked under the regime of Lieut. Tom Hamilton, Navy's head mentor.

Under the new signal plan the Tars are enabled to employ three variations when all of the regulars are in the game. It was tried out against William and Mary last Saturday and results were satisfactory to the staff. The outstanding feature of the new scheme is that of using Fred "Buzz" Borries, hitherto a half back, as a quarter back on the offensive and safety man on defense.

Proved His Mettle.

In at least two instances in the William and Mary battle, Borries proved his mettle as safety man by hauling down Indian ball carriers when practically in the clear and apparently on their way to touchdowns.

The variation of the signal calling job is between Dick Pratt, Washington boy, a back, and Dusty Dornin, veteran end. The scheme is calculated to deceive the opposition.

Although academic routine necessarily has curtailed gridiron work, the Middies had an extensive practice session this afternoon, working until after twilight. Every phase of work was on the program, though the coaches devoted particular attention to blocking in offensive play.

Seen as Major Game.

Navy folk are looking to Saturday's game with keen interest. They regard it as one of the major contests of the season, owing to the nip and tuck battle waged last year, when the teams locked in a 7-to-7 tie until the closing minutes of play. A turn of fate enabled the Naval lads to win.

The Navy eleven has appeared in Washington only a few times in the history of the game. Its last was the occasion of the game with University of Maryland in 1931.

Winnipeg Exchange Gets Wider Powers

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Oct. 2 (AP).—Faced with rumors the Canadian government might take control of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, and with a sharp break in prices, traders clothed the exchange council tonight with wider powers to control, if necessary, its own trading.

Wheat prices tumbled more than 3 cents following charges of John I. McFarland, general manager of the Canadian wheat pool, urging investigation of future dealings.

Tech Eleven Will Rededicate Stadium Against Episcopal

Friday's Game Is Second to Be Played on New Athletic Field.

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE five-year mystery of Tech High's spacious but deserted stadium seems about on the point of solution. They are actually going to play a game there.

When Episcopal High's fast-traveling eleven collides with Tech here Friday afternoon this week, it will be quite an unusual thing in Tech's history. It will be the second time in its five-year history that the stadium has been the scene of a football game.

The reason why the $200,000 athletic plant hasn't been used for anything but practice has been enveloped, more or less, in vague rumors, reports, et cetera. It seems the field was too wide open to the public; could see the games for nothing, so why hold them there?

Fence to Aid Receipts.

But they went out for a new deal up at Tech this year. Somehow or other they got a fence built around the field this summer. It's a strategically placed and well-built barrier. The stadium can now be used on a profit-making basis.

The Episcopal game appears just the right kind of battle with which to rededicate the stadium. Conqueror of Eastern, 13 to 0, last Friday, Episcopal is said to have as fast a schoolboy eleven as has taken the field in these parts in many a year, excepting nobody.

Tech, victor over Baltimore Poly, 14 to 0, in its only start, is the favorite to cop the city inter-high crown. The game shapes up like a "natural." With the new fence in their favor, the school is planning to accommodate at least 2,000 students.

Episcopal to Invade.

The game also will mark one other development in Washington scholastic sports. It will be the first visit of an Episcopal football team to Washington in approximately a decade.

The rivalry between the two schools, steeped in years of tradition, has been carried in the past on Episcopal's field.

There's plenty of enthusiasm surrounding the game at both schools. Up at Tech they're dolling the stadium up in great shape. It's had a new face put on it—the gridiron that is—the soft, velvety surface a football player's feet love to touch. In other words, the field has been resodded.

Furthermore, they're wiping the cobwebs of five years off the seats. And it doesn't look as though they'll be allowed to form again either.

Pompophone Pays $46.30 In Sixth

Only Two Favorites Win, With Young Jockey Riding Both.

ROCKINGHAM PARK, Salem, N. H., Oct. 2 (AP).—Apprentice Jockey Frankie Maschek and long shots shared the honors of the day before a gathering of 8,000 this afternoon.

Young Maschek, often in the money and with a fair amount of winners, rode to three victories in the first four races. The long shots then started to come in, with B. N. Kane's Pass, a 15-1 shot, collecting in the fifth and Mrs. J. J. Dolan's Pompophone, a 22-1 outsider, taking the sixth race.

Pass paid $32.40 for a $2 win mutuel while Pompophone was worth $46.30 for the victory in the sixth. In the last race, Percy Pike's Blink Brook won at better than $14.40.

Rides Both Favorites.

Only two favorites won during the afternoon, with Maschek riding both of them, Johnny Grew's Coming Back in the first and Jack Howard's Molly Greenock in the fourth. Maschek's other winning ride was on Miss A. Doris's Chain, the second choice in the third race. Another second choice, C. Turner's Dunrock, won the second.

There was no feature race today, although the fourth was given a title. Molly Greenock was hustled to the front and stayed ahead of the 2-year-olds, with A. A. Baroni's Home Loan second and Frank Kearns' Kindred Spirit third. That was the way they ran throughout the 5½ furlongs.

Detroit, Oct. 2 (AP).—Baigdora led all the way today to win the sixth race at the Detroit Fair Grounds, pursued for the entire route by Bright Knot, which started and finished second.

Leana G took the fourth, rewarding her backers with $26.80 for $2.

Chicago, Oct. 2 (AP).—Slim Rosie, a tiny two-year-old from the barns of Aarons & Weil, set all the pace and stood off a rousing stretch challenge by the Milky Way Farm's Irksome today to win the 6-furlong feature at Lincoln Fields.

Paul Keester, leading rider of the meeting, had Slim Rosie away fast and kept her in front, although she weakened in the stretch. At the finish she had a head advantage over Irksome, with L. M. Severson's Spicate third. The time was 1:13 3-5, and Slim Rosie paid $8.44 to win.

BLACK ROSE, in the thick of contention soon after the start, wore Sastar down when reaching the home stretch, was kept under strong pressure thereafter and had enough left to withstand DIVERTING. Latter, taken up soon after the break, displayed high speed to enter a forward position, then continued strongly until the end. SASTAR moved clear in the opening furlong, was hard ridden, but could not stay when challenged. SAINT CLEO was unable to better his position in the last five-sixteenths. AIRATRIX lost ground for the entire trip. PHARAHAWK was never a formidable factor. COUNTESS ANN was squeezed back at the turn out of the back stretch. BUY STRAIGHT was done early. GOOD CHEER broke slow.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:06. Off at 2:09. Winner, J. Lowenstein's c. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANDESCENT, $3.80, $3.20, $2.60; JACK LOW, $8.20, $5.40; SANG FROID, $3.70.
CANDESCENT, stoutly handled to maintain a forward position, responded strongly to wear down SAN FROID, was placed to punishment inside the closing furlong, then barely lasted long enough. JACK LOW moved up on the outside of the leaders at the stretch turn, closed with a rush and would have been winner in a few more strides. SANG FROID raced SMOOTH CROSSING into quick submission to gain a brief lead, was strongly handled, but failed to rally when pulled to severe drive. SMOOTH CROSSING had to be vigorously ridden to hold a slight early lead and he weakened thereafter from his efforts. DOESKIN made up some ground in the stretch drive. EASTER HERALD broke slowly and was never able to enter a forward position. VACILLATE tired. OUTBOUND showed a dull effort.

THIRD RACE—About two miles. Purse, $1,000; allowances. Potomac Steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:36. Off at 2:37. Winner, Mrs. F. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LORD JOHNSON, $6.80, $3.90, $3.00; SPINACH, $4.30, $3.50; ROZELL, $6.70.
LORD JOHNSON, restrained back of the pace for the first mile, closed gamely to wear down SPINACH at the thirteenth fence after the contestants were reduced to three, then made a bad landing at the final fence, but easily outstayed his opponent. SPINACH went into an easy lead when WRACKON lost his rider but labored badly in the last half mile and when put to a drive, ROZELL was always far back. WRACKON lost his rider at the ninth fence when taking off far from the hedge. BLACKCOCK ran out of the course at the clubhouse turn after the eighth fence. He was taken back into the course to complete the distance for fourth money.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Rock Creek. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:06. Off at 2:11½. Winner, G. D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GO QUICK, $4.70, $3.10, $2.60; PRETTY NIGHT, $5.50, $3.60; SCATTER BRAIN, $4.10.
GO QUICK, away quickly and having good speed, shook off stiff contention from GALON BOY after taking a brief lead, withstood a strong drive gamely and, stoutly ridden, just lasted to withstand PRETTY NIGHT. Latter, away slower than usual, entered contention with a rush, slipped through on the inside of the winner during the stretch drive and finished resolutely. SCATTER BRAIN, slow to settle in his stride, went to the outside in the last five-sixteenths and finished with a belated rush. BIT OF SORROW went evenly under strong handling. GALON BOY had nice speed in the first three furlongs. He weakened thereafter. BILLY BEE could not engage the leaders. OUR MAE tired after having speed in the early stages. STAR BANNER was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Anacostia. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:38. Winner, Maemere Farm's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAINE CHANCE, $4.20, $2.90, $2.40; GOLD AND BLACK, $9.10, $4.80; REBEL YELL, $6.30.
MAINE CHANCE, taken to the outside when reaching the back stretch, went into a brief lead when reaching the final curve, and then holding on desperately, just lasted to stall off GOLD AND BLACK. Latter, prominent in the early stages, continued with good courage and fought it out stubbornly. REBEL YELL forced a steady early pace and held on well. GREYGLADE had no excuses. ASHEN had speed for seven furlongs, then tired. PRECURSOR began sluggishly and was kept under intermittent punishment; he failed to rally at any stage.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500; added. The Capital Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:13. Off at 4:20½. Winner, W. D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—†SATION, $5.40, $3.20, $2.80; HAPPY GO, $31.30, $18.40; ONLY ONE, $5.50.
SATION, rated nicely in the early racing after moving into a contending position, came to willingly when straightened into the home stretch and wore HAPPY GO down in the closing sixteenth. HAPPY GO had much early speed, saved ground after moving clear, but could not withstand the winner when strongly urged. ONLY ONE found racing room on the inside throughout and closed full of run. DEDUCE, forced to race on the outside from the beginning, finished strong, but could not menace the leaders. OPEN RANGE went wide with strong pressure. DARK HOPE was unable to threaten at any stage. DUST GIRL had nice speed until reaching the home stretch. KAWAGOE was done early. STAR PORTER broke slowly and was outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:48. Off at 4:49. Winner, Howe Stable's b. or br. h. (5), by Sun Flag—Den Maria. Trained by M. Walker. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13 1-5, 1:39, 1:48 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAGSTONE, $8.70, $5.50, $3.60; INFINITUDE, $7.30, $3.90; UNENCUMBERED, $3.00.
FLAGSTONE, allowed to settle into best stride after being away in the second division, moved up with a rush on the stretch turn, disposed of UNENCUMBERED and had enough left to hold INFINITATE safe. UNENCUMBERED raced wide while being rated in front, but weakened in the closing furlong. INFINITATE, always within striking distance, moved up in the stretch run, but was no match for the winner. GARDEN MESSAGE moved up menacingly entering the stretch, but weakened thereafter.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:18. Off at 5:19. Winner, W. Sachsenmaier's ch. f. (4), by Chatterton—Merry Princess. Trained by P. Reuter. Value to winner, $435; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $15. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:40, 1:46 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—XANDRA, $5.00, $3.20, $2.30; OLAMAY, $6.10, $3.10; RESURRECTION, $3.10.
XANDRA, taken back midway of the back stretch while holding a position on the inside, went through a narrow opening along the rail when bettering her position, came to the outside of OLAMAY when the latter gained a slight lead, and then outfinished her field when it came to a drive. OLAMAY went up on the outside to race RESURRECTION in defeat, then held on willingly when put to severe pressure. RESURRECTION, rated in front, weakened during the last quarter mile and barely outstayed PRINCE ABBOT. Latter closed gamely in the last half mile. GOD O' WAR began tiring in the last five-sixteenths. POLO BAR could not keep up. LACQUER LADY broke in a tangle.

Goggin Arrives At Kenwood For Open

By Dave Herman.

TWO Willie Goggin, 28-year-old San Francisco professional, goes the honor of being the first of the Nationally famous golfers to show up for the National Capital Open championship scheduled Friday and Saturday at Kenwood.

Goggin, a veritable man mountain, who is every inch as tall and as broad as Olin Dutra, National champion, breezed into town yesterday from Columbus, Ohio, where he took down second prize money in the Columbus Open.

Goggin's claim to fame is that of being finalist in the 1933 National P. G. A. championship near Milwaukee. He lost to Gene Sarazen in a great battle after conquering favorite after favorite in his four previous matches.

Goggin Shoots 72.

Yesterday the 200-pound Californian, who looks a bit like Dutra, took his first look at the Kenwood course and, without exerting himself, scored a 72. He played in a foursome that included the host pro, Al Houghton; Leo Walper, driving-range instructor, and Walter Cunningham, of Burning Tree.

Goggin hit colossal tee and iron shots, but was unable to fathom the Kenwood greens, which were filled with top dressing, and which, as yet, have not been cut and smoothed over for the $2,000 54-hole championship. The Californian played each nine in 36, and was loud in his praise of the course, which he said would be conducive to hot scoring "if the present weather prevails."

While Goggin, a former California Open champion, was playing his shots methodically, he looked on in wide-eyed amazement as Houghton burned up the course with a 68. Monday the Kenwood pro, who is definitely on his game, did a 65. Yesterday he went out in 35, even par, and, after taking a 6 on the twelfth hole, shot 4—3—3—3—4 under par for four holes—to negotiate the incoming side in 33.

Cunningham scored a 73 and Walper a 75.

Stevens Has 74.

A dozen or so other local and Baltimore pros were on the scene for a workout. Claggett Stevens, young assistant pro at Congressional, shot a 74, and Johnny Bass, of Baltimore, had 76.

Dizzy, Gehrig Voted Most Valuable

Manush Gets 16 Ballots and Joe Cronin 8 in Writers' Poll.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 2 (U.P.).—That Dizzy, but superb, Cardinal pitcher—Jerome Herman Dean—was adjudged the most valuable National League player by leading baseball writers of the Nation, the Sporting News, conductor of the poll, announced tonight.

The ace of the Cardinal pitching staff received 57 points out of a possible 64, while Lou Gehrig, of the New York Yankees, received 51 points to become the most valuable American Leaguer.

Seventh in 1933.

Gehrig last year lost the most valuable player award by 2 points, but he has headed the list on two previous occasions—in 1927 and 1931.

While Dean was the only player on the Cardinal team to gain recognition among the sports writers, three of their opponents in the forthcoming world series were named.

Cochrane Third.

Mickey Cochrane, pilot of the Detroit Tigers, was third in the list with 29 points. Charley Gehringer, of the Tigers, was sixth with 23 points, and Cochrane's star pitcher, Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, was tied with Joe Cronin, of Washington, for eleventh place with 8 points each.

The standing in the National League follows, 8 points being awarded for the player considered most valuable to his team in the circuit, ranging down to 1 point for the eighth player named:

Jerome Dean, St. Louis, 57; Paul Waner, Pittsburgh, 31; Melvin Ott, New York, 30; Gabby Hartnett, Chicago, 20; Wally Berger, Boston, 14; Al Lopez, Brooklyn, 15; Bill Terry, New York, 14; Curt Davis, Philadelphia, 13; Carl Hubbell, New York; Leonard Koenecke, Brooklyn, and Floyd Herman, Chicago, 7 each; Woody English, Chicago, 6; Chick Hafey, Cincinnati; Baxter Jordon, Boston, and Bill Urbanski, Boston, 5 each; Dick Bartell, Philadelphia; Van Mungo, Brooklyn; Fred Frankhouse, Boston; Floyd Vaughan, Pittsburgh; Lon Warneke, Chicago, and John Moore, Philadelphia, 4 each; Gordon Slade, Cincinnati; Sam Leslie, Brooklyn, and Jimmy Wilson, Philadelphia, 3 each; Joe Moore, New York, and Ethan Allen, Philadelphia, 2 each, and 1 point each for Jim Bottomley, Lombardi and Paul Derringer, all of Cincinnati.

American League Ranking.

Lou Gehrig, New York, 51; Bill Werber, Boston, 34; Mickey Cochrane, Detroit, 29; Jimmy Foxx, Philadelphia, 27; Hal Trosky, Cleveland, and Charley Gehringer, Detroit, 23 each; Heinie Manush, Washington, 16; Earl Averill, Cleveland, 12; Henry Bonura, Chicago, 10; Al Simmons, Chicago, 9; Joe Cronin, Washington and Lynwood Rowe, Detroit, 8 each; Rollie Hemsley, St. Louis, and Frank Higgins, Philadelphia, 7 each; Sam West, St. Louis, 6; Buck Newsom, St. Louis, and Roy Johnson, Boston, 4 each; Bill Knickerbocker, Cleveland; George Blaeholder and Jack Burns, St. Louis, 2 each; Bob Johnson, Philadelphia, 1.

Paul M. LEININGER - U. of Penn., COMPLETED 20 YEARS OF SCHOOL AT THE AGE OF 22!

The Brooklyn Dodgers got three outs instead of the three runs they should have had when Babe Herman tripled into a triple play during his early career with the Dodgers. He is the only man in baseball who ever performed this "feat."

When Herman came to bat the bases were loaded—Vance on third, other runners on first and second. Babe hit a triple. Vance stayed on third, thinking the ball would be caught. The runner from second passed him on third, and was automatically out. The runner on first hesitated, and Herman passed him, putting himself out.

Finally, with two down before the ball was returned from the outfield, Vaice started for home—only to be tagged out between third and home.

Paul M. Leininger, at the age of 22, had completed eight years grade school work, four years high school field, Vance started for home—only —a total of 20 years schooling. He started school at 6 in Reading, Pa.; entered high school six years later. He was graduated from high school in 1928 at the age of 16, as the high honor pupil.

He entered the University of Pennsylvania in the fall of 1928, and matriculated in the School of Education. Within six years he completed two four-year courses—one in education and another in chemical engineering.

Hagerty Routs Gloom, Sees Triumph

By Lewis F. Atchison.

IN DECIDED contrast to Monday, when all the king's horses could not pull an optimistic word from him, Coach Jack Hagerty yesterday bubbled over with enthusiasm and admitted he expects great things of his Georgetown eleven this season.

Standing on the same spot where only Monday he decided that the Hoyas were in for another bad year, Hagerty pulled a reverse play and skirted right end with the broad statement that his men would whip Mount St. Mary's Friday night in their opening game of the season. The best he could do before that was a straight thrust off-tackle that it would be a close game.

"We have some good boys on this squad," Hagerty admitted, chucking an imaginary forward pass to George Murtagh, end coach, "and believe you me they're gonna produce or I'm gonna know why.

Williamson, Downer.

"Look at Williamson, 230 pounds and every inch an all-American—if he were playing at a school with jiffy. There's Downer, another 230-a big name he'd be selected in a pounder. He ought to do something. The rest of the boys are big though inexperienced, and I intend to utilize that heft to the greatest advantage."

"I'm not forgetting that we have some good teams to face, but I honestly believe that if these kids get out and hustle every minute of the games they'll surprise a lot of people, including themselves."

Hagesty's optimism will be put to the test Friday night, for Mount St. Mary's boasts a veteran and capable array of pigskinners. The line will average 185 pounds and the backfield will come in at 180—that's a lot of well-distributed beef for any football club.

Tom Lynch at Quarter.

Tom Lynch, brother of the basketball famous Joe, natives of Washington, will direct the Mountaineers from quarter back Friday. Other Washingtonians scheduled to appear with the Mount are Paul Corridon, formerly of Eastern; Jack McMahon, a graduate fo Gonzaga, and Al Gass, who attended Tech High School.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, jr.

BENDING an ear to the crack of the bat, a globe-wide audience exceeded only in numbers by Presidential broadcasts today will hear the static accents of Messrs. Husing and McNamee as the 1934 world series takes the air from Detroit at 1:15 p. m. over combined N. B. C. and C. B. S. networks—a total of some 169 stations with nearly 60,000,000 fans listening.

Even ships at sea will hear the "smack," for short wave stations will relay the classic around the hemisphere. The series will be heard at 1:15 p. m. when the teams meet in Detroit and at 2:15 p. m. when they play in St. Louis.

Graham McNamee, Tom Manning and Ford Bond will do the color picture and play-by-play description for N. B. C., while Ted Husing, Pat Flanagan and France Laux will call the plays for C. B. S.

Two mikes, both under control of announcers in the press box, do the work. One, usually a short table mike, is insensitive to every sound except that of the announcer's voice and only then at close range. The other, which is supersensitive, picks up incidental sounds for the fan—cheers of the crowd, the crack of a base hit, the band playing, or the raucous notes of the umpire.

The latter mike is operated by a control man who sits directly under the eye of the announcer. It gets pointed to the bleachers, now to the grandstand, now to the diamond, now cutting it off, toning it down, or stepping it up as the announcer directs. Thus the announcer is really in control of two mikes, which he blends for the listener. And thus the Nation has the sensation of having a grandstand seat. Play ball!

WITH sketches written originally for radio, WJSV, tonight starts an interesting series entitled "The Old Curiosity Shop," presented by players under the direction of George Farrington, of the Washington Civic Theater, Dramatic action centers about the ancient keeper of the shop who tells his daughter stories of the various articles left in his collection by long-forgotten persons. Tonight at 10:35 he'll reveal how "The Golden Baton" came to be left in his shop.

BURGESS MEREDITH, ex-choir boy, former Camp Dudleyite and erstwhile Broadway juvenile, who opened in the "Red Davis" sketches Monday night, proves himself to be pleasingly jocular and sufficiently wistful in his new role of a 17-year-old boy fast in the throes of a European tour and a mysterious "countess."

Amid rustling of "important papers," the closing of doors and a lot of unimportant sounds from "supers" that add confusion more than anything else, "Red Davis" manages to be entertaining. It's the personality of Burgess Meredith sticking through, however. He's the program. You'll hear the second episode tonight at 7:30 o'clock on WMAL.

JEROME HERMAN (DIZZY) DEAN, ball twirler for the St. Louis Cards, the only man who duplicated the 17-year-old feat of Grover Cleveland Alexander by winning 30 games in a National League race, will speak from Detroit tonight at 10 o'clock on a C. B. S. network during the broadcast to the Byrd expedition. Since broadcasting of the series is being handled by short wave, members of the frozen band are expected to listen in.

Abe Lyman (director of "Melodiana" series).—"Microphone technique is an art in itself and one that everybody in radio circles should master."

Grete Stueckgold (Saturday night star with C. B. S.).—"To me everything is music."

Mark Warnow (conducts for "Hollywood" series).—"I'm glad to see that radio and the movies are working so closely together for mutual benefit more than ever."

Roxy (the old ringmaster).—"I feel that the ease and naturalness of an artist's performance is undermined when he becomes clock-conscious."

Gracie Allen (she and George).—"Ever since I had my voice lifted . . . both La Scala and the Opera Comique have been turning down my offers. Don't you think that's nice, George?"

You can take it from Chief Charlie Guyon, this man Hardy Pearce, the former George Washington tackle, now Eastern's assistant grid coach, is a great guy.

Md. Gridmen Rejoined by Widmyer

Star's Ankle Healed, Plays Against Generals on Saturday.

FOR the first time since he turned an ankle in a scrimmage with Catholic University two weeks ago, Earl Widmyer, Maryland's ace half back, was in uniform yesterday and ran through a light signal drill with the Terps.

Coach Jack Faber intends to utilize Widmyer's speed to the fullest extent against Washington and Lee Saturday. With the Earl in good physical trim, Sothoron, Sachs, Gormley, Guckeyson and Headley ready to hit the line, Maryland will be well supplied with fast, able backs.

Charley Ellinger, normally a half back, has been shifted to end to fill the gap caused by "King-Kong" Keller's injury. Ellinger is a good pass receiver and better than average defensively. He may see service at the flank against the Generals.

Faber intends to have no more scrimmages this week, fearing more injuries to the squad. Forward passing, offensively and defensively, was the keynote of yesterday's drill. Maryland has a smooth, effective pass attack, but its defense in this phase of the game is a trifle weak.

Nobody remembers when such a thing ever happened before. The big sun got up and rolled clear across the top side of the world, and then went back to bed and still not a single one of its rays fell on one of the Creek folks. Every man of them snuggled down in his bed and forgot about Rover Dog and Mr. Man and Uncle Joe and everybody. They were away behind on sleep, and that Saturday night supper that Mr. Man and Uncle Joe had fixed for them was plenty long enough to reach clear over to Monday morning, and so nobody was hungry enough to wake up. But you know Joe Reet had to stay up to take Jay Bird's place, for the Creek folks just have to keep up with what goes on in their neighborhood every day, and he was the first man to get up on Monday morning. The truth is that he had so much on his mind that he was a bit restless all night, and he was glad when day came so he could get up and go to Blackie's house with his news.

Mr. Man must have known what he was talking about when he said that the red sky was the sign of cold weather that would be good for hog killing, for when Joe Reet woke up it was so cold that his teeth would have chattered if he had had any, and the wind was blowing hard enough to fly a mighty big kite. It was getting colder every minute, and when he got to Blackie's house it certainly did feel good to get in to that pretty fire. And, while the sunflower seeds that Blackie gave him for his breakfast were all that any bird could want, it didn't hurt his nose a bit to sniff that good smoke that came from the ham and coffee that Blackie was having for his breakfast. Blackie's day before had been so full of sleep and nothing else that he didn't think of whether anything had happened with anybody else, and so he didn't even think to ask Joe Reet if he had any news. Joe Reet was just itching to tell Blackie all about Mr. Man's plans for killing hogs and taking them and the other things to town, but the news was so good that he just held it back and chewed on it till they were through with breakfast. It looked like the rest of the Creek folks never would get through sleeping, for not a soul had come in sight when they had finished breakfast, washed up the dishes and come out to sit on the steps in the sun.

Blackie lit his big pipe, blew a few smoke rings and then said: "Well, Joe Reet, you don't seem to have run into any news yesterday. Everybody must have slept like I did. Did you see anything of Hound Dog, Uncle Joe or anybody?"

There was no holding the good news back any longer, and so Joe Reet told Blackie all about the plans that Mr. Man had made with his wife the day before. "Going to kill two or three pigs as soon as it is cold enough," Blackie said. "Woof, woof, and here it is getting cold enough to make even this old coat of mine almost shiver out here in the sun. There will certainly be a hog-killing at Mr. Man's tomorrow, and I will bet you a string of bamboo berries a yard long that he will send a lot of pork chops, and maybe a ham or two, to his friend, Blackie Bear. Well, well, well. When the boys get over here we will look around in the smokehouse and see if we can't fix a place for Piggie Brothers to sleep, for something tells me that we are going to need the room. And now here comes Jocko, and from the way those bushes over yonder are shaking, Dr. Coon must be running fast to get warm."

On the Sidelines . . .

By Edward J. Neil.

SO WE say so long until June to Max Baer and leave the heavyweight champion to Hollywood and the vaudeville circuits, the night clubs and society. They'll have plenty of fun with him. They'll take a lot of fighting out of him. But he'll make more money than he ever could in the same time in the ring, so who's to complain.

After all it's nice to see a champion of anything so wedded to his sport, so in love with competition that the crude feature of professional athletics, the running up of a bankroll, is a secondary consideration. Parades are staged in their honor. The world loves them as true sportsmen. And later on the same world turns its head the other way when benefits are being staged for them.

The faithful that make a sports hero rich after all have only a small part of him, and that's the way it should be. Loyalty to followers, to high ideals, to tradition are beautiful things to inscribe on medals. But they pay no grocery bills when the spring goes out of the legs, the punch from an arm, the cunning from a mind. And the so-called faithful that sometimes inspire this misguided loyalty are first to forget.

Leave 'Em Clamoring.

Remember Joie Ray, who used to run his heart out for the Amateur Athletic union? He'd have lived a full life, probably, happily driving a taxicab in Chicago, if a pair of piston legs and plenty of encouragement hadn't tossed him into mile running. Joie is battling for meal money now, in dance marathons, flag-pole sitting contests, anything where provisions are guaranteed.

I've always admired Bobby Jones for playing the amateur code to the hilt while he was an amateur, then having the sense to do something for Bobby Jones when he had paid his debt to the public. Elsworth Vines played his heart out for the dear old U. S. L. T. A. and then took professional tennis' $50,000, and will be living happily ever after—ever after those who aren't as smart still are trying to live on the reputations of years ago.

Gene Tunney took his $2,000,000 and stepped out of boxing when the game still called for him. He felt that he had given all that was necessary of himself, that he had taken only what was due him. He was right enough. Jack Dempsey, not as steely as Tunney in defining his obligations to his public and himself, stayed perhaps a little too long, though he drew down some $3,000,000 in his time. Babe Ruth is risking the glamour of a great career by holding on perhaps one short season beyond his allotted span.

The howls for those fellows turn as quickly to howls against them when the public ultimately makes that snap decision that it's no longer getting what it's paying for. The smart fellow leaves them when they're still hollering for more.

He'll Give a Show.

So back to Baer. He'll clear $500,000 before he draws on fighting gloves again, and the purist may argue that in earning that money, running around as is his nature, he'll leave behind some of the things he should be saving for the public that pays the freight and makes ring fortunes possible.

But any one who ever bought a ticket to see Baer fight was paid in full that very night. He gave boxing a show putting Carnera away that hadn't been equaled since the Dempsey-Firpo classic. He'll do the same thing any time he fights—win, lose or draw. I hope he snares plenty of easy money, and holds on to it. The wolves will be on him soon enough.

THE older your sports heroes get and the more normal their lives become, the more you realize the wisdom of that old adage about all of us being brethren under the skin.

You should get one gander at William Harrison Dempsey, the erstwhile man-mauler, now the proud pappy of a 7-pound baby girl. You could take William Harrison at the moment for the composite picture of all proud and happy fathers, as well as all those who have gone slightly, insane in the process, since the business of fatherhood first began.

He was a mad man the night and day the baby was born. He stormed up and down the hospital corridors demanding that something be done. He writhed in anguish and he demanded consolation. The doctors really had a tough time pulling him through.

But now? Well, you have to see it to believe it.

"It's not because I'm the father of this baby," he tells you earnestly. "If this baby was anybody else's I'd say the same thing. I couldn't do anything else and be absolutely honest. I tell you it's the most beautiful baby in the world, also the finest and the healthiest and the best-natured. A fellow's got to tell the truth even though he is talking about his own."

A Short Count.

For a moment the news that the baby was a girl slightly stunned the big fellow. He had counted pretty heavily on a boy. So had everyone else counted for him. It seemed only natural that he should have a boy. Besides, Gene Tunney has two boys.

But the moment he laid eyes on the wrinkled, puckered, squawling face of the tiny Joan Dempsey, delirium hit him and he's been that way ever since. Dempsey is the kind of fellow who stays that way, too. He has genuineness.

I can't help but feel, though, that nature, in presenting Dempsey with a girl, did a mean trick to boyhood in general. What a spot there is there for a boy! Can you imagine being able to say that Dempsey is your father?

There's that stage in boyhood when what the rest of the world knows and thinks about people, particularly fathers, means absolutely nothing to youngsters. It's just at that stage that you can picture a young Dempsey, embroiled in a neighborhood argument, finally falling back on the age-old custom of kids that "well, anyway, my father can lick your father and I can prove it." That's my idea of putting the rest of the neighborhood fathers on the spot.

Warning to Boy Friends.

But now that the first baby is a girl, it can be understood, too, that she's not going to have such a tough time of it either. Still, I'd hate to be a young blade of the same generation, and be faced with the task of appearing before the old man for cross-examination. It would be sort of tough if he didn't like you. There wouldn't be much you could do about it.

Furthermore, that young lady should be home from parties all right at exactly the time William Harrison, the father, specifies. The spirit of the escort may be willing to test parental displeasure, but the flesh won't be strong enough. And when Father Dempsey says "Joan" in that level, questioning, commanding way parents have when it's time to say good night, why it's entirely probable that good night will be said abruptly by the boy who hears well.

Stock Selling Relaxes Under Mild Recovery

Dullness Still Persists as Trading Volume Drops to 371,170 Shares.

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—The early October frost melted moderately in today's stock market but the chill of yesterday's reaction was still felt in the board rooms.

Although selling pressure relaxed and mild recoveries were scattered throughout the list, traders showed little inclination to reach for their favorites. Market analysts were encouraged by the fact that the downward move appeared to have been halted.

The dullness of the proceedings found the ticker tape silent for minutes at a time. Transfers totaled only 371,170 shares, the smallest volume for a full day since September 4. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 selected stocks showed a net gain of two-tenths of a point at 70.3.

Exchange Is Issue.

The British pound recovered a cent or so, but some banking quarters were still inclined to believe that this currency is pointing toward the old dollar parity of around $4.86, although it was conceded that intermittent rallies might intervene. The European gold currencies were generally lower.

Shares of some of the metal companies attracted modest followings coincident with an advance of one-eighth of a cent an ounce in the price of bar silver to 50⅛ cents, another new high since 1929. To some observers this indicated that the Treasury was maintaining its silver buying program abroad despite the recent protest of China that her monetary structure was being undermined by this policy.

Stocks Hold Gains.

Stocks that held gains of fractions to around a point or so included U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Howe Sound, Cerro De Pasco, McIntyre Porcupine, Dome, U S. Rubber preferred, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Johns-Manville, Du Pont, Interboro Rapid Transit, Texas Gulf, J. C. Penny and Wrigley. Such issues as American Telephone, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, American Can, National Distillers, International Nickel and Allied Chemical were extremely narrow. Some of the utilities, such as Consolidated Gas, North American and Western Union, were a bit easier.

Wall Street's disappointment over the unsaid things in the President's "fireside" address appeared to have worn off somewhat.

The reports of reserve banks in 91 cities disclosed another increase in commercial loans of some $9,000,000. For the past ten weeks this item has been steadily growing. Part of the gain, however, was attributed to crop moving advances.

Tulsa, Okla., Oct. 2 (AP).—Decreases in Oklahoma and California resulted in a 37,975-barrel reduction in daily average crude oil production of the United States last week, the Oil and Gas Journal says. Production fell from 2,540,675 to 2,502,700 barrels.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 83.3 Level

Trading Range Is Narrow; Sales Volume Is Cut to $7,846,000.

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—The bond market moved within a restricted area today in a dull and featureless session.

Transfers aggregated $7,846,000 par value compared with $8,431,000 on Monday, the smallest aggregate since August 20.

Rails Are Stimulated.

Railroad loans were mildly stimulated by the announcement in Washington that the Interstate Commerce Commission had approved new RFC loans for the New Haven and the Chicago & North Western and had extended for two years $12,029,350 of outstanding RFC loans of the latter.

Three issues of Chicago & North Western bonds advanced around a point and two New Haven loans sold slightly higher, although other obligations of that road yielded fractionally.

Carrier bonds improving around ½ point included some obligations of the Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Erie, Illinois Central, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway.

Industrials and Utilities.

Industrials and utilities showed little change either way. American Telephone debentures 5s advanced ¼ to 108½, Bethlehem Steel 5s were ½ higher at 105⅝ and Dodge Bros. 6s improved ¾ at 107.

All of the United States Treasury and Liberty issues were 1-32 to 6-32 higher, but Federal Farm and Home Owners loans were a trifle easier.

Realizing occurred in South and Central American bonds. All of the Argentine loans yielded around a point and Chilean issues sagged. German 5½s declined 2¼ points to 25.

Curb's Prices Close Higher In Light Sales

Metals Display Firmness as Trading Sags to 90,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—Moderate gains stood out in the curb list at the close today. A few scattered specialties were reactionary, but metals displayed firmness. Utilities, alcohols and oils were steady.

Trading was less active than yesterday, transfers approximating 90,000 shares against 100,000.

Aluminum company of America, General Tire & Rubber and Pittsburgh Plate Glass lost more than a point each. Mead Johnson moved sharply higher, finishing nearly 4 points up. Parker Rust Proof was firm.

Among metals, advances of about a point were registered by Newmont and New Jersey Zinc, while Lake Shore and Wright Hargreaves improved fractionally. Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, Hiram Walker, Creole Petroleum, Swift Internacional, Swift & Co., Sherwin Williams, American Cyanamid B and Pioneer Gold were all steady to a bit higher. International Petroleum firmed a point.

Curb—Moderate gains stood out on the curb. Some specialties were reactionary, but metals displayed firmness. Sales decreased to 90,000 shares.

Wheat—Values sank as prices crumbled abroad. Wide-open 5-cent breaks in Winnipeg quotations, with the Liverpool market smashing the season's bottom record, pulled Chicago figures down. This is the first time in two months the price dropped below the $1 mark. December sold at 99; May at 99⅛.

Cotton—Early declines in cotton were modified in late dealings. Rallies were not fully maintained, but prices held barely steady in latter sales. October sold at 12.14; December at 12.29.

Higher Costs Trim Company Incomes

Boston, Oct. 2.—Although most corporations are having their earnings curtailed because of higher operating costs, a number of domestic companies are proving exceptions to the rule, says the United Business Service.

The metal companies are outstanding in this respect, and likewise the food companies and others dealing with agricultural products. The favorable earnings trends in these lines have been due to extraordinary events—legislative developments like the gold and silver buying program and such unpredictable happenings as the drought.

These industries are thus placed in a favorable position, and holders of stocks representing concerns in them need not be fearful.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Adversely affected by the weakness in Wall Street, the stock exchange registered a dull tone today. Gilt-edged securities were fractionally easier, while home and Argentine rails, German bonds and oil shares were also weaker, the latter on the unfavorable overnight American news. Tobacco shares held firmer, transatlantic issues were very unsettled, and west African gold mining stocks developed irregularity. Kaffirs were quiet despite the new high price reached by bar gold. The market closed dull.

Paris—Political troubles in Spain and Rumania and lower Wall street prices helped to depress quotations on the bourse today. Young plan bonds reached a new low on rumors that Dr. Schacht was about to declare a complete moratorium on these and the Dawes loan issues. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse were unsettled today, business being the smallest for some time. The closing tone was weak.

American Smelting Co. Votes Dividend

Newmont Mining Board Declares Return of 50 Cents.

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—Directors of the American Smelting & Refining Co. today declared a dividend of $4.25 a share on the 7 per cent first preferred cumulative stock, clearing up accumulated dividends on the issue. The payment will be made on December 1 to stock of record November 9.

On September 1 the directors ordered a dividend of $4.50 on account of accumulations.

Directors of Newmont Mining Co. declared a dividend of 50 cents a share out of earnings, payable October 31 to stock of record October 18. A statement by the directors accompanying the announcement said that the payment should not be regarded as the establishment of a permanent dividend policy. A similar payment was made last April.

Directors of Supervised Shares, Inc. have declared a quarterly distribution of 1.2 cents per share on the capital stock, payable October 15 to holders of record September 29. This is the same as the previous distribution made July 16, 1934.

Directors of Beneficial Industrial Loan Corporation today declared regular quarterly dividends of 87½ cents per share on the preferred stock, Series A, and 37½ cents per share on the common stock, both payable October 30 to stockholders of record October 15.

The board of directors of General Mills, Inc., announced the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents per share upon the common stock of the company, payable November 1st to all common stockholders of record at the close of business October 15, 1934.

U. S. Dollar Moves Nearer Sterling Parity

London, Oct. 2 (AP).—The United States dollar today moved a fraction nearer its old sterling parity of 4.86 2-3 to the pound, closing at 4.92¼ in a day which saw the price of bar gold soar to the highest mark in history under the influence of the weakened pound.

After opening at 4.90¾, the close was 3¼ cents to the pound better than the overnight rate of 4.95½.

Market operators said they believed that the demand for dollars to settle commercial accounts, including seasonal goods like cotton and tobacco, largely accounted for the strength of the dollar against sterling.

In addition, there were further signs of increased speculative activity on the market coupled with the operations of continental short traders who were covering.

As far as market operators could determine, there was no indication that the British equalization fund was concerned with the dealings.

Wheat Values Sink as Prices Slump Abroad

First Time in 2 Months That Figure Drops Below $1.00.

Chicago, Oct. 2 (AP).—Wide-open 5-cent breaks in Winnipeg wheat quotations, with the Liverpool market smashing the season's bottom price, pulled Chicago wheat values downward today.

Reports were circulated that the Canadian government contemplated virtual suspension of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange because of alleged excessive selling there which had cost Canada's treasury an immense sum.

It was reported huge amounts of Argentine wheat had been hedged in Winnipeg, and that undue selling also had been done in Winnipeg, both by British interests and American, a course made possible owing to the Canadian government artificially maintaining the Winnipeg market at a big premium over prices elsewhere.

Wheat Closes Nervous.

Wheat in Chicago, after a maximum setback of 2¼ cents, closed nervous, ⅞ to 1¼ under yesterday's finish, December new 99@99⅝; corn, ¼ off to ⅝ up, December new, 76⅜@76⅞; oats, unchanged to ⅛ lower, and provisions showing 10 to 15 cents decline.

For the first time in more than two months, all Chicago wheat futures went below $1 a bushel. A big trade at the reduced prices that resulted was witnessed here. Domestic mills, however, were active buyers on the declines, and this helped to cause rallies.

Meanwhile, the collapse in the Winnipeg market was attributed to the Canadian government withdrawing at least temporarily all buying support at Winnipeg. Liverpool advices at this stage told of stop-loss selling there because of cheap offers of low-grade French wheat and the large stock of old wheat remaining unsold in Argentina.

Estimates were heard that the Canadian government now holds about 150,000,000 bushels of wheat, much of it representing a loss of $1,500,000 for every 1-cent-per-bushel drop in prices.

Dump Millions of Bushels.

British and American and Canadian interests as well were alleged to have dumped millions of bushels on the Winnipeg market, confident the Canadian government's stabilization efforts would ultimately prove futile. In this connection, a leading Chicago trade authority said:

"It is probably true that a moderate amount of American wheat has been hedged in the Canadian market, inasmuch as it is well known that for many years the Canadian crop was heavily hedged in the Chicago market when differences were attractive.

"It is simply a case of any position which is being held out of line attracting selling anticipating an ultimate readjustment. The fact remains that the temporary relationship is one which will most certainly attract pressure."

Corn, oats and rye displayed stubborn resistance to selling that accompanied breaks in the wheat market. Country offerings of corn to arrive were meager.

Provisions declined, responsive to downturns of hog values and of cereals.

Cheap Things.

When I was rich, before the slump, I was a gay and spendthrift chump, and life was full of zest; I had contempt for all those things which were not fit for sceptered kings, and I must have the best. I feel some cold, unpleasant thrills when viewing old-time tailor bills, the figures ran so high; I trained with the aristocrats and purchased costly shirts and hats, the best that I could buy. I had my meals at fine hotels, where all the guests were wearing bells and waiters wore dress suits; I blew the kopecks left and right, and purchased everything in sight, like other blithe galoots. My auto was a thing of charm, and what it cost would buy a farm, with corn in every crib; and everything I owned was fine, the garments hanging on the line, my tucker and my bib. But times have changed and now I'm seen in raiment of a rusty green, that once, when new, was black; the hats I wear are old and quaint, and I can not afford the paint to decorate my shack. When pangs of appetite I feel, I go somewhere and buy a meal for twenty-seven cents, and talk about the weather dry, between the roast beef and the pie, with other busted gents. Along the thoroughfares I spin in my old car that's built of tin, and growing red with rust; she rattles like a house afire, and always has a leaking tire, and kicks up lots of dust. I sometimes mourn the good old times when all the trees were bearing dimes, but when we come to tacks I'm just as happy now I'm broke, with all my thingumbobs in soak, as when I'd coin in sacks.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Prospective Neighbors — By Harry J. Tuthill

HO HUM! WELL JO, WAS THERE ANY MAIL TODAY OR...?
I THINK THAT VACANT FLAT NEXTDOOR IS RENTED. A COUPLE LOOKED AT IT WHO I KNOW HAVEN'T BEEN MARRIED VERY LONG. HE HELPED HER OUT OF THEIR CAR AND PICKED UP HER PURSE WITH A SMILE WHEN SHE DROPPED IT.
THEY'RE VERY CULTURED. THE ONLY COUPLE THAT EVER LOOKED AT THAT FLAT WHO DIDN'T RUB THEIR FACES AGAINST THE WINDOW TRYING TO LOOK OVER HERE.
PEOPLE WHO MIND THEIR OWN BUSINESS, EH? FINE! WHAT'S HIS NAME AND WHAT DOES HE DO?
I WENT OUT IN THE HALL TO SWEEP AS THE LANDLORD WADDLED UPSTAIRS WITH THEM, BUT INSTEAD OF STOPPING HE JUST BOWED VERY COOLLY TO ME AND PUSHED THE COUPLE INTO THE FLAT.
EVERY TIME THAT LANDLORD BRINGS PEOPLE HERE HE ACTS AS THOUGH HE WAS GIVING THEM THE SECRET WORK OF SOME LODGE.
HE PULLED THAT SAME STUFF ON ME SUNDAY WHEN I WENT DOWN INTO THE YARD WHILE HE WAS TRYING TO HYPNOTIZE TWO PROSPECTS.
THE NEXT THING I KNEW I HEARD FOLKS TALKING ON THE SIDEWALK. WHEN I GOT TO THE FRONT WINDOW I FOUND THE LANDLORD HAD TAKEN THAT COUPLE OUT THE BACK WAY. IMAGINE!

DICK TRACY — Her Viewpoint

DO YOU SOLEMNLY SWEAR TO TELL THE TRUTH—THE WHOLE TRUTH AND NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH SO HELP YOU GOD?
I DO—
NOW— MR. GUMP— SUPPOSE YOU TELL THE COURT IN YOUR OWN WORDS JUST WHAT HAPPENED TO BREAK UP YOUR UNCLE'S NUPTIALS—
WELL—THE KNOT WAS BEING TIED—THE PREACHER WAS JUST GOING TO DECLARE THEM MAN AND WIFE WHEN THIS FELLOW TOWNSEND ZANDER CAME RUNNING DOWN THE AISLE—WAVING A MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE SHOWING MILLIE DE STROSS WAS HIS WIFE—
DO YOU BELIEVE MISS DE STROSS WAS SINCERE IN HER INTENTIONS?
WHY IT WAS ALL A FRAME-UP RIGHT FROM THE START— SHE AND THIS ZANDER FELLOW PROBABLY HAD IT ALL PLANNED OUT— THEY'D GET BIM UP TO THE ALTAR— BUST UP THE MARRIAGE AND THEN TRY TO FLEECE HIM FOR ALL HE WAS WORTH— WHY— I COULD SEE THROUGH THAT WITH MY EYES SHUT—
